

SIX THOUSAND PEOPLE MADE HOMELESS BY FIRE

FIRE SWEEPS WISCONSIN

Forests and Towns Are Burned and Loss Is Very Heavy.

MARQUETTE, Mich., May 19.—A stretch of territory over 250 miles in length, reaching from Newberry, on the east, to Bes-emer, Mich., on the west, and north, and south between the shore line of Lake Superior and the southern boundary of the upper peninsula is dotted with forest fires.

SETTLEMENTS WIPED OUT

Settlements and farmhouses have been wiped out, timber lands destroyed and hundreds of persons rendered homeless.

It is impossible to estimate the financial loss, but figured on the basis of local conditions it is probable that hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property has been destroyed. The loss in the immediate vicinity of Marquette is over $50,000, involving only the destruction of personal property and not including the devastation of timber lands or damage to railroad property.

The town of Quinnesec and several hamlets in Menominee iron range are reported wiped out.

HEAVY PROPERTY LOSS.

Northwest of Marquette the town of Birch, where the Northern Lumber Company has fully $500,000 worth of property, was threatened with destruction, and men were sent from here by special train to fight the flames.

POLES ARE DOWN.

Because of the destruction of telegraph poles, wires are down in all directions and communication by that means is impossible. Unless rain falls soon much more havoc will be wrought, as the woods are very dry.

SIX THOUSAND HOMELESS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 19.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Escanaba, Mich., says:

The forest fires in northern Michigan have almost swept blank an area of one hundred miles. Six thousand people are homeless, it is estimated.

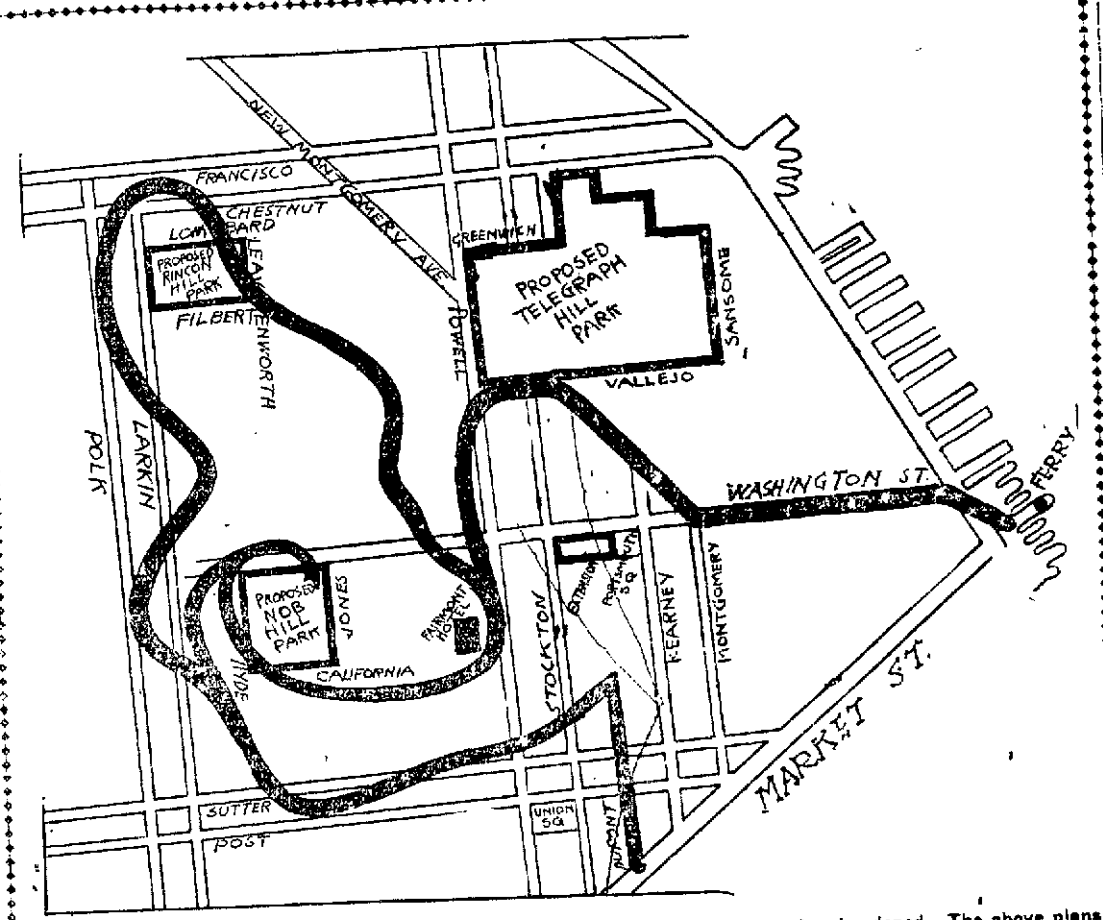

Up to the present situation may be epitomized as follows:

Ralph—Town of 100 people, almost wiped out.

Alfred—Population, 200, every house and huge piles of logs burned.

Alvoie — Population, 400; boarding house and huge piles of

GIVES HIS LIFE TO PAY DEBTS

Bank Cashier Steals Fortune, Commits Suicide; Life Insurance Will Replace Theft.

NORFOLK, Va., May 19.—Irwin Tucker, cashier of the Savings Bank of Newport News, knowing that he was about to be arrested, charged with defaulting in the sum of $10,000, committed suicide at Newport News today.

Tucker's shortage may reach $20,000, but it can be made good from his life insurance.

MICHAEL DAVITT HAS SUFFERED A RELAPSE

DUBLIN, MAY 19.—MICHAEL DAVITT HAS SUFFERED A RELAPSE AND A TATION.

WILL REWARD HEROES

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The Navy Department is in receipt of further evidence of the heroic conduct of the personnel of that branch of the service when the earthquake and fire overtook San Francisco. This came in the shape of a report from the United States Naval Hospital at Mare Island, giving the names of three officers who were patients and who volunteered for duty when the disaster overtook the Golden Gate city. These officers were Ensign R. C. Davis, Lieutenant A. Stokes, Marine Corps, and Lieutenant F. A. Udell, Marine Corps.

Rear Admiral McCalla, commanding the Mare Island Navy Yard, in forwarding their names to the department, says: "These officers are, in the opinion of the commandant, to be commended for their zeal and for the fact that, notwithstanding they were in the Naval Hospital, they applied for or continued on duty after the earthquake and subsequent fire in San Francisco."

Lieutenant Stokes, it was shown, continued on duty at the main gate daily as officer of the guard, while Ensign Davis and Lieutenant Udell were directed by the commandant, in conformity with their request, to proceed to San Francisco and report for duty. When the emergency was over these two officers returned to Mare Island and re-entered the hospital.

CHILDREN CROWD IN SCHOOLS

County Officials Trying to Solve Serious Problem.

The school census marshals have been swamped with the influx of children from San Francisco and what is to be done with all the extra children is a matter that is now confronting County Superintendent of Schools T. O. Crawford.

Ayame, Berkeley and Oakland, to say nothing of the territory between these places, are filled with refugee children and the question of who is entitled to the money for them that comes from the State is a matter of great importance. Oakland's census marshal has just completed his work which has been checked up at the County Superintendent's office, and the refugee children have been left out of the list except where such children are actually going to school here and declare that they were not taken in San Francisco. Oakland's number of census school children last year was 17,316, while the total number of children under the age of 17 was 23,826.

DOLBEER WILL IS UPHELD

Supreme Court Declares the Lower Judgment Must Stand.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19.—A decision has been handed down by the State Supreme Court affirming the action of Superior Judge Coffey in admitting to probate the will of the late Bertha M. Dolbeer. The decision disposes of an estate valued at more than a million dollars, the bulk of which will go to Miss Etta Marian Warren, who was the young woman's confident.

Justice Henshaw, who wrote the decision, stated that there was absolutely no evidence to support the theory that Miss Dolbeer was of unsound mind. He pointed out, however, that the court might have given the instructions asked by the contestants, placing before the jury for determination the question whether Miss Dolbeer committed suicide or met death by accident. This, however, was not considered sufficiently grave to warrant a reversal.

Miss Dolbeer was killed about a year and a half ago by falling from a seventh story window in

EARTHQUAKE IN EAST

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 19.—Two earthquake shocks were felt in Western Michigan at 3:20 o'clock this morning. Distinct shocks are reported from Holland, Grand Haven, Tonnville and Bangor. The first shock lasted about six seconds and the second about three seconds. Residents of Holland rushed out of their houses in night attire, the quake having thrown open many doors. Rumbles like thunder were heard around the shores of Black Lake. No serious damage is reported.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS

RACINE, Wis., May 19.—Two terrific explosions which shook buildings throughout the city occurred early today and hundreds of persons leaped from their beds, believing there had been an earthquake. The shocks were caused by an exploisor at the Rand & Laflin powder mill, located at Pleasant Prairie, where the glaze and press rooms and the counting mill were blown to pieces, involving a loss of perhaps $25,000. Windows in houses throughout the village were broken. One man was hurt.

COBALT, Ont., May 19.—Several tons of dynamite exploded in the northwestern section of the town yesterday, wrecking twenty-five houses and throwing the citizens into a panic for a time. A number were more or less injured by flying debris, but none seriously. The explosion was caused by a forest fire igniting the building in which the dynamite was stored.

WOMEN WANT TO VOTE IN ENGLAND

Four Hundred Call on the Premier and State Their Case.

LONDON, May 19.—Escorted by 40 members of Parliament, nearly 400 women suffragists, representing organizations from all parts of the country, interviewed Premier Campbell-Bannerman at the Foreign Office today and presented their claims that women be allowed to vote.

Only eight members of the numerous deputations were allowed to cross the threshold of the Foreign Office, and each speaker was limited to five minutes.

But in the aggregate of forty minutes the Premier heard about the women's rights was the unanimous demand of the speakers, some of whom presented to the Premier their "minimum demands," claiming that immediate legislation bestowing on women the right to vote was necessary and declaring that a promise to take the matter up at the next session of Parliament would not satisfy them.

PREPARED TO SACRIFICE.

One speaker manfully declared that the women were prepared to sacrifice their lives in behalf of their demands.

PREMIER SMILES.

The Premier smiled upon the starkly assorted gathering of women, including a number of the "suffragettes" who were accompanied by side with factory employees, and said he sympathized with the object of the deputation, but asked his visitors to be patient until the government became more united in favor of the extension of the franchise to women. The cause, he added, had made enormous strides of late years. Personally he believed that women were as well qualified as men and, perhaps, better to exercise the right to vote, and in his opinion the deputation had made out a conclusive and irrefutable case.

VIRTUE AND PATIENCE.

Speaking for others however, as well as himself, the Premier pointed out that it was necessary to preach the virtue of patience. Only harm would result if, because of his own sympathies and convictions, he gave a pledge regarding the time and method of achieving the object they had in view.

No party or government, he said, was entirely united on the subject. The Premier warned the women against indiscreet action which, he said, probably would check the flowing tide and delay the coming of the day when, undoubtedly to the growing strength of their cause.

The Premier concluded with saying that he believed that it would not be many years before the desired change was brought about. This reference to "years" was met with hissing from the members of the deputation who left the Foreign Office evidently greatly dissatisfied.

STREET DEMONSTRATION.

The arrival of the deputation at the Foreign Office was preceded by a street demonstration consisting of women from various localities marching, with banners flying and bands playing. The women were met by a large crowd of on-lookers who accompanied them to the Foreign Office.

AS BOLD AS PIRATES

Imbued with the idea that Lake Merritt was a miniature Spanish main, and that they were pirates bold, Peter Kelly, John Walsh and Daniel Smith, all of San Francisco, secured a boat yesterday afternoon, and embarked in search of adventure, but finding none they sought excitement by promiscuously firing a revolver at every object in sight.

When Detective Quigley and Holland, who had been sent from the police station to investigate the cause of the shooting, ordered the men to come ashore and submit to arrest, the three bold adventurers declared that "death was preferable to surrender, and they threatened to throw the law to come and get them, threatening to 'fill them full of lead' if they attempted it.

On their refusal to surrender, Quigley and Holland drew their own revolvers and the sight of the weapons in the hands of the officers convinced the desperado trio that discretion was the better part of valor, and they meekly came ashore and submitted to arrest. They were booked at the police station on charges of discharging firearms within the city limits.

While on the way to the lake one of the men drew the revolver and at East Twelfth street and First avenue fired at a horse driven by Manuel Pacheco, an employee of Davis' cash store. The bullet lodged in the neck of the animal, inflicting an ugly wound. After shooting the horse the men hired a boat and rowed out on the lake.

A few minutes after they had left the boat house, several shots were heard on the lake, and a message was sent to the police station and Detective Quigley and Holland were sent to the scene. Just as they arrived at the lake two more shots rang out, and one of the bullets passed close to the head of Frank Lawrence, a repairman employed by the Contra Costa Water Company as he was driving past First avenue on Twelfth street. The desperado immediately ordered Walsh, who had done the shooting, and his companions to come ashore and surrender. The three refused and the officers drew their revolvers at the sight of which the three men quickly surrendered.

Walsh and his companions were placed under arrest, and this morning Pacheco swore to a complaint charging Walsh with malicious mischief, and an additional charge of discharging firearms within the city limits was also placed against him. Kelly and Smith are held pending further investigation by the police.

NO MURDER MYSTERY

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19.—Detective H. P. Bray, who was detailed to investigate the supposed case of murder at the Hotel Ormond, 440 Eddy street, where a skeleton was found inside a furnace, near a bottle with the word "Poison" blown in the glass reports to Captain of Detective Burnett that in his opinion it was a case of suicide and that the fire destroyed all evidence save the bottle.

The detective states that it would have been impossible to have thrust a large human body through the door of the furnace.

TO AMEND TO LEASE CHARTER 99 YEARS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19.—One of the petitions that will be presented at the special session of the Legislature will be one from this city to allow the local authorities for the period of two years to amend the charter without having to obtain the sanction of the Legislature. This is enacted will provide for many contingencies which are not thought of now, but might occur during the reconstruction.

Before an amendment could be adopted it would require that three fifths of the vote cast on a given proposition be in favor of the amendment.

CHILDREN CROWD IN SCHOOLS

between the ages of six and 17 years of age, is 2304 children, and the gain in the total population of children under the age of 17 is 294.

In speaking about this question this morning County Superintendent of Schools T. O. Crawford said "Only those children have been taken in the census who believe we have a right to claim money for. Those who have come into the county have not been taken if they stated they had been taken in San Francisco before. But those who are now in attendance upon Oakland schools have been listed. The large majority of children now within the city limits have not been taken at all for the reason that it is expected they will return to San Francisco as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made."

"What I have said of Oakland applies equally to Berkeley and Alameda. The increases in all of these cities are not unusual in fact, Alameda only shows a normal increase, showing that no advantage has been taken of listing any children that do not belong there. On the other hand there is no doubt in my mind that many of the children we have not listed will remain here and get the benefit of the schools for at least a year."

Berkeley's census roll shows that this year it has 3346 census children and a total number of children amounting to 6993. Last year Berkeley had 3246 census children and 6408 children all told. The gain to Berkeley in census children is 506 and the gain in the total number of children 585.

Alameda's census roll this year shows a total number of census children of 4463 and a total of 5702 children in all. Last year Alameda had 4182 census children and 5398 children in all. The gain in census children is 281 and in the total number 304.

SENATORS WILL NOW CONFER

The letter of Senator Beland, who is chairman, to the members of the finance committee, has been heretofore published in THE TRIBUNE. The letter of Senator Lukens, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is as follows:

"Dear Sir,—Inasmuch as there is every reason to believe that the Legislature of California will be convened in extraordinary session, everything that can be done to prepare for the session, expedite the work and shorten the length of it as much as is possible, with due regard to the adequate performance of the duties that will devolve upon it, is of the greatest importance. I therefore suggest that the members of the Judiciary Committee of the session of 1905 meet at Oakland in the City Hall on Monday, the 21st day of May A. D. 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of considering the various legislative measures rendered necessary for the welfare and convenience of the people of the State of California, in consequence of the disaster of the 18th of April, 1906, and also for the purpose of receiving the suggestions of all those who have any business to bring before the committee upon needed legislation."

"Other committees of the last session I am informed, will assemble at Oakland, the same day and date, and I therefore invite the fullest expression of your views upon this matter, and shall greatly appreciate an early answer letting me know if the date above named is convenient to you for the proposed conference of the members of the Judiciary Committee."

The two committees will be accessible to any citizen who desires to present his views or other suggestions, as the members desire to obtain an expression of both the wants and the opinions of the public. The committees will confine their deliberations mainly to these propositions:

What measures of relief are necessary? To what extent can relief be afforded within the limitations of the Constitution?

To what extent will it be just and advisable to burden the taxpayers of the State at large in affording relief to San Francisco and the other stricken communities?

Hon. Thos. L. Ford, chairman of the San Francisco Law Committee, has been notified that the committees will meet informally, and would be pleased to confer with his committee or any member thereof.

As a large majority of the Senators composing the committees have announced their intention to be present, the attendance promises to be large.

BERT AND EWING BACK FROM SOUTH

Eugene Bert, president of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, and J. Cal Ewing, one of the magnates of the League, have returned from Los Angeles, where they went for the purpose of effecting some disposition of the Los Angeles baseball team, which has been purchased by Ewing and several others in the Coast League. The mission was a failure insofar as a disposal of the team was concerned. It is believed, however, that arrangements will be made whereby the team will continue to wear a Los Angeles uniform.

FOUR DIE IN FIRE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19.—Here is a graphic story of how four lives were snuffed out by the fire and earthquake, told by United States Deputy Surveyor J. A. Adams in the following communication addressed to Coroner Walsh.

City Coroner, corner Grove and Laguna streets, San Francisco, Cal.—Dear Sir: I beg to make a statement regarding certain persons who lost their lives in the fire of April 18th and regarding whom I have never seen any mention in the newspapers or elsewhere.

"The persons of whom I speak were in the building which collapsed at the south-west corner of Seventh and Natoma streets and was, if I am correctly informed, known as the Kingsbury Hotel. I, together with perhaps a dozen other men made an attempt to rescue a girl or young woman from this building. We were compelled by the flames to leave before succeeding in the attempt. The woman was conscious and was not greatly injured before the fire reached her. Her name was not known to me. Perhaps a week or 10 days after the fire I visited the spot and found that some one had dug from among the debris what appeared to be the bones and other charred remains of the woman, and had placed them upon the bottom of an inverted washtub on the curb and what became of them afterwards I do not know.

"Three other persons are known by me to have been burned to death in the same building which was in a light well or some kind of shaft about centrally located in the building, attempting to chop their way through the debris to some one's question as to how many were down there, that there were three persons. I suppose this number included myself. All of the persons perished by the fire of April 18th. I know nothing, although I was told by a man who said he had roomed there that there were many others there.

Yours respectfully,

"J. A. ADAMS"

CRUSHED UNDER HAY

To have a bale of hay drop from an upper window upon him was the experience of Frank Covello, a longshoreman of 281 Second street this morning. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital where the extent of his injuries has not yet been ascertained. He was in great pain and while there were apparently no bones broken, he was crushed to the ground by the weight.

The accident occurred at First and Clay streets, where Covello stated some men threw a bale of hay out of the small upper door of a barn on to the sidewalk as he passed by. He was given no warning and the bale, weighing 250 pounds, struck him fairly on the head and shoulders and knocked him down. It had struck the sidewalk and was considerably lacerated. These, however, were minor injuries and his great complaint was of the pain in his shoulders and stomach.

S. P. ENGINE EXPLODES; TWO MEN ARE KILLED

WELLS, Nev. May 19.—Engine No. 2402 pulling eastbound passenger train No. 6 of the Southern Pacific exploded about 2 o'clock this morning at Cedar Lake, 20 miles from here. Two employees of the company lost their lives.

Until an examination of the boiler can be had it is impossible to ascertain the cause of the explosion. The railroad men attribute the fearful accident to lack of water in the boiler and to the locomotive was pulling second No. 8 up a heavy grade and was passing Cedar Lake at thirty miles an hour when without instant warning the explosion occurred.

The boiler was torn from the trucks and blown 400 feet diagonally from the track. The cab was blown 200 feet to the reverse side of the point where the boiler landed.

AGED WOMAN ASKS TO BE SUPPORTED

Aged and infirm Mary Murdock of Elmhurst has brought a suit for maintenance against James Murdock, whom she says refuses to support her. Her attorney, H. L. Elliott, also secures a restraining order to keep her husband from disposing of his property and withdrawing his money from the bank.

Both parties to the suit are over 70 years of age and were married in 1900. Murdock owns a couple of acres of land in Elmhurst, and the wife claims that she has been refused both food and clothing from her husband and seeks aid of the courts in making him give what is necessary for her maintenance.

GIRL MARRIES AND MOTHER WEEPS

With tears in her eyes Mrs. Silverman of 516 Seventh street came into the county clerk's office today and asked to be allowed to see with her own eyes the license that had been issued to her daughter Ida and August E. de Bernart, to whom she was married by Justice of the Peace Geary on the 16th of this month. She gave her age as 19 and Bernard swore that he was 22.

Mrs. Silverman says that she knew nothing of her daughter's marriage and that she is but 17 years of age. She did not know where she had gone nor the man to whom her child was married. When I look at the marriage license which told her little she asked who had come to the license office with her daughter, but this could not be remembered and she went away very sorrowful.

ate for adoption, from whatever source it may come, can be passed there without the most careful scrutiny, on pain of opening a free road to the "Man or Horseback." The country has had reason to congratulate itself that the Senate was not swept from its feet by the free silver flood; that it did not plunge headlong into the free trade morass. Without the careful examination of the Senate, to what vast sums would not the Government expenditures extend? It would be easy to bankrupt the country through internal improvements alone were there no restrictions upon the plans and propositions brought forward. And in the matter of our treaties with foreign nations, into what dangerous complications should we not be entrapped were it not for the careful scrutiny of the Senate? Such scrutiny is a part of its duty, and when it ceases to perform it and refuses to ascertain and act upon the facts which it is able to secure, then we may be sure that this great bulwark of the people's liberties has become too rotten to withstand the torrent which will bring destruction to the Republic. I believe that in the end the people are always right, but they are right only at the end of a period of careful study and deliberation- and their sober judgment always justifies the deliberation which has prevented the hasty action that would have brought mischief in its train. The very critics who now bombard the Senate with denunciatory articles will, a few years hence, be glad to acknowledge that they were wrong. Some of them doubtless unintentionally misrepresent the Senate's action or policy, but others appear to do so deliberately. But in whatever manner the misrepresentations are made, they will not swerve the Senate of the United States from doing its duty to our whole country. Its members fully realize the great responsibility resting upon them in their obligation to support the Constitution and it is the safety of the Republic that they will not shirk it but will bear the burden imposed upon them, even the burden of unjust denunciation.

CANOE CLUB IS PLANNING
FUTURE

The damage done to the home of the Oakland Canoe Club on Session's bay was not so bad as it is thought. The house is a wreck but everything inside is saved. A present the club is housed on the Alameda through the courtesy of the boating association of the University of California.

A meeting has been called by Commodore Charles Sewart for tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock on the Alameda. The members will then discuss the scheme of building a new clubhouse or trying to raise the old one. The program for the season has been postponed for the time being by the Commodore. If the sailing members wish an extra schedule it will be made out tomorrow.

TAKES MAN TO BEAT MISS
SUTTON

BOSTON May 19.—Miss Sutton of California, the world's woman tennis champion, was defeated in an exhibition set yesterday but it took a man to do it. The victor was N. W. Miles of Harvard, holder of the university championship, who won 6-4. Miss Sutton qualified for the invitation singles by defeating Miss Delya Sears of Boston.

The mixed doubles event which closed Miss Sutton's day at Longwood proved nearly as exciting a contest as that of the day before in which she and her partner N. W. Cabot narrowly missed defeat. The pair had as their opponents yesterday afternoon Miss Marion Fenn and E. W. Leonard both of the Longwood Club. Miss Sutton and Cabot won in straight sets but twenty four games were necessary to decide the contest, the scores being 6-4, 8-6. Miss Sutton and Cabot play Miss Phyllis Green of Philadelphia and N. W. Miles the Harvard champion in the finals of the mixed doubles today.

Many telegraph and mail orders are coming in and by dark last night the seats had run over the 200 mark. If the seats are sold the total is said to be something like $40,000 which will be by far the largest sale in Los Angeles.

WILLIE LEWIS
DEFEATS GANS

NEW YORK May 19.—Willie Lewis, a welterweight pugilist, met and outpointed Joe Gans of Baltimore in a six round bout in Madison square Garden. Lewis was the aggressor from the start. He landed half a dozen left-hand jabs on Gans' face and a short right hand uppercut on the face before Gans sent back a single blow.

Gans had the better of the second round as he got a Lewis' face several times with left and sent his right over the heart of the sea. This was the only round in which the Baltimore boxer had the upper hand. After four rounds Lewis scored point after point and from early in the third Gans left eye began to puff up from Lewis' hard jabs. Tim Hurst was the referee.

WILL QUIT THE

PORTLAND May 19.—In an interview today James Agnew, business manager of the Seattle baseball team, declared that Seattle would quit the Coast League and would apply for admission into the Northwest League. He declared that Seattle had sunk a great deal of money in the Pacific Coast League proposition and would no longer remain in the organization.

This announcement is at direct variance with statements accredited to him following the meeting of the Pacific Coast magnates at Oakland when it was reported that he had expressed his intention of remaining in the Pacific Coast League.

Effects of the Fire on the Mining Industry.

In many respects, the effects of the San Francisco conflagration on the mining industry in California and the neighboring mineral-producing states are far-reaching. The metropolis furnished considerable of the capital invested in the exploitation of the mineral belts of the Pacific Coast. It is to be regretted now that it did not do this on a more extensive scale; for, if it had, the revenues of some of the best and most profitable mining properties of the State would have been available now for the upbuilding of San Francisco, instead of being in the hands of foreign corporations and their net income going abroad to benefit other communities. For example: the Mountain Copper Company, which, in all reason, should have been in California ownership, is instead in the possession of English investors. But the latter had more wisdom, more faith in California's mineral resources and more enterprise than her own people, when it came to the risk associated with the development of a great mineral deposit of base metal. That property was long enough on the market before the Englishmen took it up to give ample opportunity to San Francisco capitalists to acquire possession at a figure which one month's profits now more than returns. But Shasta's Iron Mountain deposit was too near home, and, although yielding gold, was unprofitable as a gold proposition, so it was turned down and our domestic capital went abroad to Peru to exploit poorer property of practically the same character. What San Francisco capital in that instance despised, English capital appreciated, and the wealth galore which the property has since been yielding for nearly ten years has gone abroad to benefit alien communities. The revenues of that one mine would have added materially in the upbuilding of San Francisco at the present time. And the same may be said, with truth, regarding the best results obtained from gold-dredging, which branch of the mining industry has likewise passed largely into the hands of a foreign corporation.

But the relations of these mining operations to San Francisco's present plight are now unchangeable. They are among those things which "might have been otherwise," but are now, unfortunately, beyond remedy. San Francisco's misfortune is affecting the mining industry unfavorably in another way. Not only is the flow of local capital into mining development temporarily stopped, but the mineral production of the State is being reduced. Many mining enterprises in the course of development, which promised in time to produce good results, must now be suspended, for the reason that the capital invested in opening them up systematically must be withdrawn, to be devoted to the restoration of the burned district. Beyond question, the great metropolitan disaster has set back mining development in California a great many years, and that at the most promising period in its later history.

The oil interest is, however, the greatest sufferer. The annual production of California petroleum had reached the enormous figure of 35,000,000 barrels at the close of last year. Its employment as fuel in the local manufacturing industries was steadily increasing before the disaster overtook the metropolis. The latter was among the largest consumers. The annual local consumption of fuel oil had, indeed, reached over 5,000,000 barrels. It promised to exceed 10,000,000 barrels before the close of this year. For the time being, at least, this source of consumption has been almost entirely cut off, and the production of California oil wells will have to be correspondingly curtailed until the local industries which consumed their products are restored, unless some new market for them is soon developed.

Speculation in Nevada mining stocks has also been practically stopped by the big fire. Perhaps this is among the lesser evils of the disaster, and it may, consequently, be viewed with some degree of equanimity, for in the swirl of speculation, of which San Francisco was the center, the operators of "wildcats" reaped a golden harvest at the community's expense.

But amid the general gloom which the conflagration has cast on the mining industry of California, there is one bright spot. The great calamity has doubtless given an impetus to the mining and manufacture of California cement, which no other incident in human experience could have given this branch of the industry. Honestly constructed concrete proved to be one of the materials which offered the greatest resistance to the assault of the flames, and there are plenty of examples standing today in the ruins of the city across the bay of its incombustibility. In the rebuilding of San Francisco California cement will undoubtedly cut a conspicuous figure, and the impulse which the increased demand is sure to give to its production may go far toward compensating for the damage done to other branches of mining.

The numerous demands the Douma is making on the Czar can easily be compressed into one word, "abdicate." In spite of the pains taken to hobble the Douma, the Russian nation has found its voice and is talking to the autocracy to beat the band.

The Democratic capacity for blundering was aptly illustrated by John Sharp Williams when he made a party issue of the proposition to allow Pacific Coast shipbuilders a differential of 4 per cent in bidding for the construction of warships. The issue presented was geographical and not partisan in any sense, but the Democratic leader fatuously lined his followers up against Pacific Coast industry, and was bested in the outcome.

Excise Reform in San Francisco.

San Francisco is wrestling with the question of raising the retail liquor license from $84 to $400 a year. The latter is the license fee in Oakland, and it is none too large. It would be much better if San Francisco would raise the license and reduce the number of saloons. This is advocated by Archbishop Montgomery and the Chief of Police, and is concurred in by the better class of saloonmen.

But Chief Dinan makes another suggestion which seems to be still more pregnant for good. He says the combination of bar and grocery store should be abolished. The Chief is right. It is a bad combination. It is responsible for a vast deal of domestic wretchedness, poverty and for other evils of a still more corrupting kind. It introduces the liquor traffic directly to women and children under conditions and circumstances which cannot fail to prove demoralizing. It also places a tax of large proportions on the household expenses of people who work for a living.

If the San Francisco authorities will only divorce the bar from the grocery store they will effect a great reform. By raising the license they will make it impossible for many of the more reputable grogshops to exist and will render unnecessary much of the police vigilance hitherto exercised.

Once more Mr. Cleveland rises to remark, in the tone of consecration so habitual and becoming to him, that he positively will never be again a candidate for the Presidency. His party came to that conclusion long ago, and it is about the only Democratic suggestion made in years that the country has cried amen to heartily.

Redlights in Los Angeles.

The unco' guild who objected to San Francisco refugees coming to Los Angeles on the ground that the sins of the redlight district would be introduced into the Angel City, will doubtless be shocked to learn that a redlight district already exists in the city. According to the Herald there is a tenderloin section in Los Angeles that for vilence can challenge comparison with any slum on the continent. Says the Herald editorially in reference to a two-column description of the "crib" district:

"The attention of Mayor McAleer, the police commission and Acting Chief Auble is called to the resumption of the 'redlight district,' as described in this morning's Herald. Citizens will be astonished to learn that the social evil, which was once so notorious in Los Angeles, and which was supposed to have been 'regulated' more than two years ago, is running again, with the lid off, and is rapidly becoming as notorious as ever."

Yet some of the ultra virtuous people of Los Angeles feared their town would be "contaminated" by refugees from San Francisco. They even expressed the belief that God destroyed San Francisco to punish the sins of her inhabitants. Which only goes to prove that it is easier to see the mote in your neighbor's eye than to discern the beam in your own.

When the San Francisco Law Committee gets through with the State Constitution that document will look like thirty cents—on paper. Nevertheless, the Constitution will stand as it is till the Legislature and the people decree that it shall be altered. The attempt to formulate a new Constitution under pretense of devising measures for the relief of San Francisco fire sufferers is growing farcical. The strenuous desire exhibited to tear the existing Constitution to pieces suggests that there is good business for somebody in the process. This is no time for jobs to be put forward in the guise of measures to relieve the dear people.

Speaker Cannon is entitled to the thanks of Californians for helping get through the four per cent differential in favor of Pacific Coast shipbuilders desiring to bid on contracts for warship construction. Having done us this good turn, he might go further and remove the embargo he has placed on the passage of the bill to pay California five per cent of the money derived from public land sales in this State in accordance with the rule established for the other States. California is the only State that has been denied this percentage on land sales. The exception is a self evident injustice that Speaker Cannon is condoning and assisting by refusing to let Congress correct it. Now that he has shown himself to be generous he can afford to be just.

THE CONNECTICUT AND LOUISIANA "RACE."

Among the speeches on the navy delivered in the House last week was one by Mr. Knowland of California, which possesses a special interest because it was devoted to the question of the advisability of having any of the new warships built at the government navy yards. Public interest has been aroused the past few years in the "race" between the twin battleships, Connecticut and Louisiana, under construction, respectively, at the New York navy yard and at the private yard of the Newport News shipbuilding company. Being exact duplicates and building at the same time, the two ships have afforded a test of the soundness of the conflicting contentions as to the proper government policy. Both ships are nearing completion, and the chief constructor of the navy department has lately estimated that the Connecticut, built in the navy yard, will cost from ten to fifteen per cent more than the Louisiana. The excess in cost thus credited to government shipbuilding has been hailed as conclusively demonstrating the unwisdom of using the navy yards at all for construction work. Mr. Knowland's speech helps one to examine this conclusion with critical attention.

Even if the question of cost were the only one to be considered, it would not follow that this "race" between the Connecticut and Louisiana had settled the conflict of opinion. The Connecticut is the first great modern battleship built in a navy yard, while the Newport News company has had an ample experience in warship construction, which has been invaluable to it in the way of assembling a corps of skilled mechanics and providing a thoroughly equipped plant. This was an important advantage for the private company in a shipbuilding contest, as was admitted by Admiral Capps, when he said to the naval committee: "It must be borne in mind that the Newport News yard had the advantage of a completely equipped plant. The building slip was already prepared and overhead crane facilities and other appliances were at hand, and their mechanics had had greater experience in doing this class of work." The private companies, which have been lauded as so superior to the navy yards, have in many cases found the building of their first warships disastrous financial ventures. The Newport News company lost heavily on the battleships Kentucky and Kearsarge; the Union Iron Works of San Francisco made no money on the Charleston, that firm's first attempt; only a few years ago a Richmond firm went into bankruptcy while constructing the Galveston. Experience seems to have demonstrated that the private contractors in this line of work do not begin to make the business a real commercial success until they have turned out one or more ships, and thus have perfected their yard equipment and gained a thorough mastery of the most economic methods of construction. Yet there are those today who seem to insist that a government navy yard in building its first modern steel battleship shall equal or surpass an experienced private yard, which is spurred by the competition to make its best possible showing against government construction.—Springfield Republican.

RICH PLUM FOR LAWYERS.

The Hopkins Will Contest for Part of $ Millions Settled After Five Years.

After being juggled back and forth in the courts for five years, much to the profit of lawyers, but at a loss to the beneficiaries, the will of Major Robert E. Hopkins, who was one of the vice-presidents of the Standard Oil Company, was sustained Tuesday by the Court of appeals, and the original decision of Surrogate Sherman that the will was valid was upheld. The litigation was carried on by a guardian in behalf of Robert E. Hopkins, a son of the testator, who personally objected to the will and said that he was satisfied with what had been left to him by his father. Robert's guardian, however, sued to have the will set aside, with the result that lawyers have reaped large benefits from the estate, while the son, in whose behalf suit was brought, lost the amount of the litigation. It is said, however, that despite the heavy legal expenses, the value of the estate has increased fifty per cent.

When Major Hopkins died it was said that he had made a will, but for months no one could find the document. His safe deposit vault was emptied and every other place where it was thought he might have placed the will was searched, but no trace of it was found. The case went to the Supreme Court. It was found, in 26 Broadway Major Hopkins had a little old fashioned desk, and this also was searched, but the will was not found in it. There was a tiny secret drawer in the desk which opened when a spring was pressed, and witnesses testified that this drawer was emptied at the first search, only letters being found in it. The desk was searched a second time and the little drawer again opened. This time the will was found, but when the paper was unfolded it was found that there were fourteen strongly drawn and heavily inked lines through the signature. It was because of these lines that the contest over the will arose.

The estate was appraised at about two million dollars, and the difference in the income of the son under the will and what would have been his share if his father had died intestate was only a few hundred dollars. The son, for whose benefit the effort to have the will set aside were made, objected strongly to the litigation. He testified that so far as he was concerned he wanted the will to stand and that he was perfectly willing to have his mother get all that the will gave her. Despite the objections of the son, the case went before the appellate division three times and was tried twice before a justice and a jury in the Supreme Court. It was not until before the Court of Appeals twice that it was said Tuesday that the law-yeers for the contestant would not appeal again.—New York Times.

Sammy Braunhart
Fooled His Enemies and Still Lives.

THE KNAVE

Supervisors the Only People Making Real Money.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19.—Former Supervisor Sammy Braunhart is one of the few men who have lived to read their own obituaries. Like many of the others, however, Sammy is surprised to find that anyone had dared to say a good word about him, for during the twelve years prior to the time of his supposed death he had been kicked metaphorically and physically, all up and down the coast.

For a long time he was afraid to walk on Market street for fear that Eddie Graney would use him as a street sweeper. He was publicly and privately insulted in the Senate chamber at the State capital, and during the period he served on the waterfront he was the joke of even the most humble member of the Longshoremen's Union.

The strange part of it all is the manner in which the various newspapers received word of the supposed passing of the ubiquitous Sammy. It was Sunday afternoon that the "joyous" information was received at the Examiner office. "Blinker" Murphy immediately proclaimed it was too good to be true, and Ned Hamilton announced that the age of miracles had come again. Finally a very sympathetic appreciation of the few good qualities of the former Senator were composed and published on the front page of the paper.

The next afternoon the Bulletin, taking a tip from the Examiner, published an almost eulogy of Braunhart. As usual, however, the Bulletin added a tinge of sensationalism by stating that a paralytic stroke had sent Sammy over the top of Divide. On Tuesday morning the Examiner announced that the rumor of the former Supervisor's death was an error, but the Call and Chronicle, not having investigated the story themselves, reprinted the Examiner's original story of the statesman's passing. Here is an apology for the error in originally announcing the death of Braunhart submitted to one of the papers for publication and rejected with a rebuff by the editor in charge:

"The friends of Sammy Braunhart will be pleased and the enemies of Sammy Braunhart will be pained to learn that he is still alive. The information given out by the doctor in charge at the German Hospital last night, that Sammy's condition is very poor, and that his chance for recovery is exceedingly slim."

Sammy Braunhart first butted into public life about twenty years ago as a confidential messenger for the notorious Chris Buckley. He could be found at any time of the day or night hanging around Buckley's grogshop on Bush street, next to the old Standard theater just so long as there was anybody there to buy a drink or give him a quarter for carrying a satchel. He got a menial job in the City Hall and felt that he was on the high road to become a statesman. When he was elected to the State Senate he presented Chris Buckley a beautiful buggy robe. That's how he got the name of "Buggy Robe" Braunhart. Later he fell out with Buckley because he saw a chance to fall in with the reformers and during the last eight years he has done little else than denounce his former associates who took him off the curbstone to put tax money into his mouth.

Braunhart was a conductor on the old Sutter-street car to keep the passengers amused by his strange dialogues as a cross between Scandaloovian and a boiled cabbage. He could get along with the names of the streets pretty well until he reached Devisadero, but when he got to that thoroughfare there was a tragedy. As the car wheeled along he would sing out, "Steiner, Pierce, Scott," and then stop. As the dummy passed over Devisadero he would put his hands to his mouth and half cough half shout "anudder street." In Sammy's tongue there is no V. When Sammy went down on the water front to be a wharfinger he didn't know very much about ships. He had a fair knowledge of the steam-schooners that repeatedly pass over the bar south of Market through residing in the Twenty-Eighth district, but as to the real thing in actual vessels he knew nothing. The first day he went on a ship he strolled about the deck in his most approved peacock fashion until even the seagulls got tired. Then he thought he would go down into the cabin. So he called one of the deckhands in his nonchalant manner and said:

"Vich is the vay to the pasemend?"

At the last election the Labor party eulogized Sammy out of political life. In fact, it was the heartaches following his ignominious defeat that sent him to the German Hospital. During his term of office as a supervisor of San Francisco Sammy Braunhart was a time-serving corporation tool. Frequently he would denounce public service corporations in public in order to distract public attention from his actual corporation connections. He was owned body and soul by the telephone company, which corporation rewarded him for his services by giving him power to name a certain number of its employees. As soon as he was kicked out of office by a long-suffering public, the telephone company was the first institution to abandon him to his deserts.

The only people who are making anything like real money on this side of the bay at present are the members of the Board of Supervisors. I understand that they have established a clearing house and a sort of municipal "kitty" where anyone that wants anything may drop his "bit." The manner in which certain corporations are being granted favors by the supervisors is, to put it mildly, "suggestive," especially as these merry gentlemen have been living rather rapid lives since their election to office. And how they do it on $100 a month has been a mystery to the waiters in the French restaurants and to the bartenders who find it very difficult to get more than $3 a night beyond their wages out of the cash registers and still hold their jobs.

Speaking of the bartenders' cheerful method of "getting his" when the boss isn't around, I heard a very good story the other day on "Spider" Kelly. As everybody who stays out after midnight knows, the "Spider" ran a "web" on Eddy street, opposite the new Poodle Dog. Now the "Spider," like all proprietors of grogshops, knew full well that his bartender was taking more than his wages. One day the "Spider" came into his place just in time to see the bartender filling his pockets with the contents of the cash register.

"What are you doing?" shouted the "Spider."

"I'm taking a little earfare," responded the bartender.

"Where do you live?" hurled back the "Spider;" "in Australia!"

Fire Commissioner John Shakespeare Parry, member of the Pile Drivers' Union and at one time dignified by being publicly charged with stealing a colt, was the administration candidate to succeed the late Denny Sullivan as Chief of the Fire Department. I don't suppose that it would be possible to find a more inadequate or impossible candidate for this really important job than John Shakespeare Parry. But for some reason or other he was slated for the position and all the wheels of the "machine" were vigorously turned in his behalf. In fact, it went so far that his name was submitted to the other members of the commission for endorsement. Fortunately, they turned him down on the grounds that while he might be a very good man at a primary, he was certainly anything but a desirable head for the Fire Department.

The natural successor to Denny Sullivan should have been Assistant Chief Dougherty, but his name was no sooner suggested than the vast army of "knockers" pulled out their hammers and started a really superior anvil chorus. The first thing they did when the members of the commission arrived at headquarters was to point at Dougherty and then at their heads, all the while turning their index fingers, to suggest that wheels were whirling, and in the Dougherty head.

Of course, every one with half an ounce of common sense knows full well that Dougherty is not only a sane but a more than competent fireman. But the knockers agreed that the most effective way to put him out of business as a successor to Chief Sullivan was to hint that the disaster had unhinged him mentally. One of the commissioners, in discussing the attitude of the knockers, remarked that the problem to solve now is not whether Dougherty will succeed Chief Sullivan, but whether it will be possible to keep him out of the foolish house, now that the stories of his traducers have been widely circulated.

This peculiar method of knocking reminds me of the schemes Chris Buckley used to resort to in order to queer a would-be candidate politically. If a man with a bank roll went to Buckley and asked him for a nomination the first thing Chris would do was promise him everything he desired. About three or four days before the convention, after Chris got "his" he would send Larry Conlan down south of Market street to circulate a rumor that the man had been a convict in Ireland, England, Scotland, Germany or France, or whatever country he hailed from. It would take Larry probably from five to six hours to thoroughly circulate the story over half the town. At the last minute Chris would send for the man that had the bank roll before he (Chris) got it, and tell him that while he personally wanted to nominate him for the desired office, he was utterly handicapped because of the stories of his criminal career that had been circulated by Larry Conlan.

"But I'm innocent," the man would say, "and the stories are the infamous inventions of an irresponsible scoundrel."

"Well," Buckley would reply, "as you say, they may be the inventions of an irresponsible scoundrel, but so far as I know the voters seem to have great confidence in the statements of Mr. Conlan, and until you can publicly and legally prove his charges against you to be untrue, I cannot give you the nomination for the high office to which you aspire."

And it all comes under the head of politics.

The best earthquake story I heard is the man who experienced a miracle. It seems that a wealthy traveler and his wife got here the night before the catastrophe, and finding the regular hotels closed, secured apartments at Delmonico's French restaurant, which was shattered almost as much as the reputations of its patrons by the temblor. Here's how the traveler tells what happened:

"I know the fire was terrible and I know the earthquake was awful, but I can reconcile myself to both. The one thing that annoys me is the miracle."

The friend to whom he was talking asked him what he meant by the miracle.

"Well," he replied, "I went to bed with my wife, who is a beautiful woman. I have read in the bible how water was turned into wine and how Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt. The earthquake did not wake me, but the fire did, and when I awoke I found alongside of me in bed not my wife, but a brick chimney. That's what I call a miracle."

THE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM TO BLAME FOR BIG ARMY OF HELPLESS BOYS AND GIRLS?

By BETTY MARTIN

educational system is based on a rotten foundation. There are too many failures and too little accomplishments achieved in the curriculum. The schools were designed for the common man, those who must have a mind and brain. They were designed to raise the standard of living and morality, and if it were ever the duty of the founders of this country to give American boys a fair start in life, combined with a thoroughly good drilling in the rudiments of education.

Up to Parents. If they have the mind and inclination for anything beyond this and their parents can afford the necessary monetary outlay, well and good.

If they want the higher education, and the "old man" hasn't the "dough"—these quotations are from the mouth of an Oakland High School boy who for his soul's sake had better be scraping bricks—they'll work for it, provided they want it hard enough.

People in this life usually get the thing they most desire, be it money or fame. At least they do if their backbone isn't wobbly.

Boys and Girls. Manual labor and the domestic sciences should be inculcated in American girls and boys from the primary grade up to the day of graduation. We mightn't have quite so many wide-pantalooned, shirt-jacketed, hands-in-the-pocket elegant young gentlemen of leisure in our midst to theorize about the fathers and mothers who bore them, or to complain, as I once heard a certain well-known San Franciscan, that his father had no right to have so large a family, in that it lessened his share of the family estate, but there'd be a perceptible increase among the ranks of self-respecting laboring men.

As for girls, the appalling ignorance of domestic science among them is frightful to contemplate. I am speaking, mind you, strictly of the laboring classes, and I include among them clerks and office girls of all sorts.

Laid Bare by Quake.

The earthquake and fire has been a revelation of helplessness, hopelessness and ignorance. From Dan to Bersheba, figuratively, has come in a call for cooks, housekeepers, waitresses, and so on, down the line, and of all the applicants for work the number among them who can do anything of this sort is pitably small.

They can type-write, stick type, blind books, make candy, put up drugs, roll cigarettes, make paper boxes, keep books, paste labels, work in the canneries or anything like that, but as for making one good honest loaf of bread, they know no thing so commonplace.

Poor Husbands!

I believe that American working men are surely being driven to perdition by the poor cookery done by their wives, and that the desire to drink and frequent saloons is more because of the revolting home atmosphere than anything else.

The brainy girls, it is true, on marrying speedily adapt themselves to circumstances and make good housekeepers, but even they have to serve an apprenticeship at the expense usually of a husband who cannot afford the outlay, and it's safe to say that the majority of them wish that they'd learned how to keep house before getting married.

Housekeeping is a business which requires a good head as well as good temper and health, and girls ought to be made sign a certificate before they get married, showing that they know at least something about what is necessary.

Another Class.

Outside of the brainy ones, there is another class of American girls, most of them of foreign descent, who at an early age are obliged to support themselves and, possibly, help their parents keep the numerous little ones whom President Roosevelt advocates as a prime factor in the stability of the nation.

Absolutely, many of these girls can't even make their own beds; they know nothing of cookery, and the concoction of a savory Irish stew is beyond their powers.

Sloppy coffee, soggy potatoes and baseball biscuits they know more or less about, but anything further is a tax upon brain and ingenuity. Personal cleanliness, too, is often a matter of secondary consideration.

Parents Blamed.

I hold these girls have been more sinned against than sinning. Since a knowledge of the things which make life worth living is not to be gained from their mothers, it should be afforded them in the public schools. Every girl in our land, rich or poor, who is educated at Uncle Sam's expense, should be taught to bake, sweep, sew and make beds in addition to the three essential "R's." When this comes about there'll be fewer divorces, fewer suicides and less drinking among the men, and greater happiness all around.

By no means would I exclude a single girl from store, factory or office, but I would make domestic training compulsory. After that, there is the world to conquer, whether in the guise of cook, nurse, clerk or professional woman.

So far back as 1630 there was a proverb to the effect that "God sends meats and the devil sends cooks." He who runs may read, and may he also profit thereby.

THE MEDDLE

THINGS NOT QUITE THE SAME.

Amusements are not much in any one's line these days. Life's pictures are measured off against too many dark tones. The tragedy of San Francisco is too deep and sombre to fade out before lesser things. All one's friends have lost deeply in many ways. It is not a question of 'Did you lose anything?' but of 'How much did you lose?'

It will be a long time before conditions are normal again. Probably life will never go on again in quite the same old way.

Old neighborhooDs are broken up and after a big catastrophe like this friendships never remain quite the same. In some places where one feels sympathy they are deeper. In other places where they have been dependent upon money and position they cease to exist. In any case there are great changes so great that it will be long before we fairly realize them.

Mean time there are very few of life's lighter touches anywhere. No one is specially well dressed for good clothes just now when people's homes are burned or of minor importance. There is a nervousness in the atmosphere. A lot of repose among one's friends that is specially trying. One must have lived through the earthquake and the terrible days of fire that followed to understand it all.

A leading man who has been away said 'I feel like a foreigner—an alien—I find all my old friends so changed. The men who have lost everything have an indescribably gray look and when the people begin to talk to you of the earthquake they all have the same curious look in their eyes—a frightened look—one full of terror. To be part of things one must have lived through "earthquake days" with one's friends.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The Symphony concerts have been the great events of the winter, and have called out an audience of never less than five thousand people. One noticed the effect of the recent fire in smaller audience in the amphitheater on Tuesday where there were about thirty-five hundred to listen to the last Symphony concert of the season.

Doctor Wille intended to present 'The Messiah' with a chorus from the university of three hundred voices and it was to end the series of concerts with a sort of glorious finale.

But the earthquake ended symphony plans as it ended many another plan and Doctor Wille had to substitute another program for the grand one which he had planned.

The university was dismissed immediately after the earthquake so the chorus was not possible. But we will gladly wait for the Messiah till next winter. It was quite right of Doctor Wille not to attempt it if it could not fairly reach his own standard of excellence.

It is quite remarkable that he managed to give us so good a program. Many of the musicians lost their instruments in the great fire and others had to be obtained for them and rehearsals were much interrupted. Nevertheless we had a program most delightfully given and of the high order of artistic excellence which Doctor Wille has led us to expect.

It was most appropriate that the program should begin with Beethoven's 'Rites of Athens.' Each one of us could most feelingly interpret the music. A few weeks ago it could not have appealed to us as it does today.

The Beethoven Fifth Symphony was well worked out in the finished style we are accustomed now to regard as characteristic of Doctor Wille's work, and the allegro movement marking the finale was a climax exceedingly well achieved.

The Grieg numbers were charming. The first one 'Dawn' was rare and sweet and most exquisite. One saw the pale light in the far eastern sky and one saw the tender, sweet approach of 'Rosy-fingered Dawn.'

'Anita's Dance' was full of charm, of poetic feeling, and the numbers ended with 'In the Hall of the Mountain King'—weird, entrancing—the music in its measures carrying one far away to the fairyland, where the Mountain King reigns supreme.

Of course it is always in Wagner that music lovers find the dignity and greatness of life. It is Wagner who interprets its majesty, its power, its possibilities its potentialities. He represents the supreme achievement of a great human soul, and he dominates others by a wonderful strength leading them on, far away from the smaller things of life to the greatness beyond. He reaches out for the possibilities lying latent in other souls and grasps them. Depths of thought of deep feeling are all about one as the Wagner music pours out its wonderful harmonies or sends out into space some wonderful climax.

This was what the 'Waldweben,' the music-drama 'Siegfried,' meant for many of us. Tshalkowsky's 'Nutcracker Suite' closed the program. Tshalkowsky is the Russian composer, who is creating such a furor in Europe's musical centers, as well as in New York, and we have to thank Doctor Wille for making us familiar with some of the noted composers' best work. The 'Miniature Overture' was exceedingly clever, and the characteristic dances were charming, among the best numbers being the Russian Dance, the 'Arabian Dance,' the 'Chinese Dance.' The third part of the suite was the charming 'Waltz of the Flowers' given in a most exquisite fashion.

Among those at the symphony concert were Mr. and Mrs. William R. Davis, John Metcalf, Rev. Robert Sessions, President and Mrs. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, the Misses Touchard, Mrs. John L. Howard, Mrs. Oscar Lunnie, Mrs. John F. Connors, Mrs. A. D. Thomson, Miss De Fremery, Miss Mollie Connors, Mrs. M. W. Kales, the Misses Kales, Miss Florence Hush, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. Hathaway, Mr. and Mrs. John Galen Howard, Mrs. Frederick Bahls, Mrs. Frederick Dalham, Miss English, Miss Elizabeth Moore, Near Ashton, Stevens, Miss Wellman, Miss Sanborn, Miss Ethel Moore, Miss Anna Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Lettis Oliver, Mrs. W. S. Goodfellow, Miss Horton, Mrs. Alfred von der Ropp, Mrs. Samuel Taylor, Mrs. Wymann, Miss Margaret Taylor, Mrs. Florence Henshaw, Mrs. Frederick Stratton, Mrs. T. C. Coogan, Miss May Coogan, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barton, Mrs. E. J. Cotton, Mrs. Frederick Stolp, Mrs. Herbert Moffitt, Miss Joliffe.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

All the commencement exercises are passing off very quietly as bests a time when so many people have had serious losses and are in deep trouble. The reception to the graduates by President and Mrs. Wheeler was most informal. No special invitations were sent out and the reception marked a last farewell reunion of a band who had journeyed together for four years. There was no class day where the fraternities kept open house, and where string bands played merry music with all Berkeley en fete for the occasion.

There was no funny extravaganza in the Greek Theater—nothing of all the fun and merriment characteristic of the graduating exercises at the university.

It was a sad graduation in many ways. Many of the families of the graduates had met with heavy losses, and depression lay deep upon the land.

DINNER HAS BEEN POSTPONED.

The dinner which was to have been given by Miss Horton at the Home Club has been indefinitely postponed. Miss Horton sent out a hundred and fifty invitations to graduates and former members of the Horton School, and to other friends of the school and the dinner was to have been given in honor of its twenty-first birthday. It is a notable occasion the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of so successful a school as the Horton School—one that has stood so faithfully for the highest educational ideals of today.

The history of the Horton School is interwoven with the history of the city and the twenty-one years of noble effort expended in the school will be far-reaching in results in the great future awaiting our city.

The graduating exercises this year will take place very quietly at the Horton School and there will be no class party, as had been originally planned.

RETURN FROM TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walsh and Miss Marian Walsh, who were to have spent part of the summer in the Orient, returned home this week. They sailed immediately for California upon receiving the news of the San Francisco catastrophe.

Mr. and Mrs. John Britton, with Miss Britton and Miss Layman, will arrive on the next steamer from the Orient. They wished to come on the Manchuria, but they could not obtain passage, so great was the crowd of tourists coming to California.

The Brittons have cut short their trip in the Orient, and are, no doubt, counting the days till they return to the Pacific Coast.

THOMAS MAGEE IN NEW YORK.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richardson Wells, formerly Miss Jean Hush, have been in New York, going there to meet Thomas Magee.

One hears that the latter has been very successful in organizing a large syndicate which will send capital out here to rebuild San Francisco. One must admire the real courage of Mr. Magee and the young men like him who refused to be cast down by the frightful destruction of San Francisco. Before the ashes were cold they were formulating plans for a city on a grander scale and it is hope and pluck like that which always succeeds.

GUESTS AT HIGHLANDS.

Mrs. A. N. Towne and her daughter, Mrs. Worden, are Mrs. Reques guests at Highlands next week.

Mrs. Towne and Mrs. Worden were at their ranch when their California street home was burned, so nothing of all their clothes or jewels or household effects was saved. They lost very heavily as did all their California street neighbors by the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young arrived from the Islands this week, taking the first steamer from California after the news of the earthquake reached them. The suspense in Hawaii was very terrible, the cable brought the news of the earthquake, and then telegraphic communication was lost for two days. They were days of tremendous anxiety for those who had relatives in San Francisco.

Alexander Young has large business interests here and he came to San Francisco at the earliest possible opportunity.

Mr. Young's two daughters, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Dredge, were at the Empire, one of the leading apartment houses across the bay.

Among the apartment houses very badly wrecked by the earthquake were the Cecil, the St. Dunstan and the Empire. The St. Dunstan especially seemed to be only a pile of bricks.

The Dredges arrived from London just the week of the earthquake and they joined the Howards at the Empire. Of course, they lost everything but they are only like thousands of others.

WHEELER HOME WAS BURNED.

Mrs. P. L. Wheeler and her children were in Springfield, Massachusetts, visiting Mrs. Wheeler's sister, when the big fire took place.

The Wheeler home on Gough street was not burned so the fine library, the rugs, pictures and statuary were saved.

But the business property downtown from which a large revenue was received was totally destroyed.

Mrs. Wheeler will return immediately to California.

MRS. PIERCE TO RETURN.

Among other Californians who are coming home are Mrs. Orestes Pierce and the Misses Florence and Edith Selby. They went East some weeks ago en route for Europe where they expected to stay a year. The Selbys have relatives in Paris and they intended to make that picturesque city their headquarters.

But the earthquake and subsequent fire changed all their plans. Mrs. Pierce felt compelled to return to California and look after her business interests and the Selbys deemed it wisest to return also. They will probably go abroad later this year or early next year.

LECTURER LEAVES FOR THE EAST.

Jerome B. Landfield, the popular university lecturer left for the East last week and will spend six months abroad before returning to California. Mr. Landfield will go to Russia and probably no one in the United States knows Russian conditions as perfectly as Mr. Landfield. He is very popular socially, and is known among the leading clubs by the jolly-sounding name of 'Jerry Landfield.'

TRIP IN THE HOLY LAND.

Mrs. Nora Ryle and her daughter, Miss Ryle, have been spending some weeks in a most interesting trip through the Holy Land. They recently spent some delightful days in Jerusalem. The Ryles are going to Paris where Miss Ryle will spend some months in study.

WILSONS GO BACK TO SAN FRANCISCO.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson and little Master Wilson have returned to San Francisco, and have reopened their home on Pacific avenue.

While in Oakland they were the guests of Mr. Wilson's mother at her home on Hobart street.

GIVING IN CHARITY.

The New York Times says: There has been much giving in charity, and the call for aid from San Francisco has met with a hearty response. The Pacific Coast and New York are closely allied. There have been several small concerts and private musicales which contributed materially to the fund. On Saturday last, at the home of Mrs. Wood, on West End avenue, there was a representation the gathering of Californians and Miss Lily Lawlor, an other San Francisco amateur and professional sang and played. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs has been here, there and everywhere working with much enthusiasm. She had planned to leave New York Thursday to go directly to the coast.

MISS BEATRICE FIFE, WHO HAS GONE WITH HER FAMILY TO PALO ALTO FOR A SEVERAL MONTHS' STAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, William Crocker and Ogden Mills have also gone West to their California homes. Some New Yorkers have established offices in San Francisco and among the fashionable architects who are to help build the new city are Thomas Hastings and Whitney Warren. Mrs. Oelrichs is to rebuild at once her destroyed property and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr. will do likewise.

GUESTS AT THE DRUM HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. John Drum and Miss Sara Drum are the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Glenn at the latter's home on Castro street.

The Drum residence in San Francisco was not burned but it was so badly wrecked that it will require extensive repairs before the family can again live in it.

MRS. THOMAS IN BAKERSFIELD.

Mrs. Harry Thomas and her little boys are in Bakersfield spending the early part of the summer with Mr. Thomas, who is developing very successful business interests there. One hears that Mr. Thomas is very popular with the people of Bakersfield. It is very hot there in the summer and Mr. Thomas plans each year to spend some weeks at Carmel-by-the-Sea.

BRIDE'S LOSE GIFTS.

One is so sorry for the brides who lost all their lovely wedding gifts. One can replace other lost things, but not wedding gifts. The brides themselves are rather sorry, but for the most part they share the general indifference over losses. Those who lived through the earthquake and the fire have very different standards very changed values of life.

Among those who lost very valuable wedding gifts are Mr. Charles Minor Cooper, Mrs. Wallace Alexander and Mrs. Thomas Driscoll.

DR. BOYES TO REMAIN HERE.

Doctor William Boyes, one of San Francisco's very able and most successful physicians, has decided to remain permanently in Oakland. He will be associated with his brother, Doctor Edwin Boyes, who is one of Oakland's leading physicians with one of the largest professional connections on our side of the bay.

YOUNG MEN IN BUSINESS.

Many of the young men see large business possibilities in the development of real estate across the bay. One of the syndicates there bids fair to be very successful. Among the leading members are James D. Phelan, Thomas Magee, Rudolph Spreckels and W. H. Moore.

Another well known and popular young lawyer, who is engaging in the real estate business is John Sanborn of Fruitvale.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scott Goodfellow have sent out announcement cards this week announcing the marriage of their daughter, Marion, to Stanley Moore on the afternoon of Saturday the twelfth day of May, at three o'clock Church of the Advent, East Oakland, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Moore have gone on a wedding trip to Yosemite Valley, and on their return are planning to establish their own artistic home in East Oakland.

DR. DUNN RETURNS.

Doctor J. M. Dunn is among the professional men who lost a large office equipment in the fire. He has come to this side of the bay to locate permanently and is at present at the home of his mother.

MRS. MARTIN LEAVES HOME.

Mrs. Eleanor Martin has leased her beautiful San Francisco home to the Marine Corps who have taken possession of it. A visit to the handsome residence is sign of the sudden change in events. It seems strange to take luncheon in the grand dining room where so many gorgeous banquets have been given and to be served with corned beef and sandwiches.

Many of the rooms now devoted to the service of the Marine Corps have the most gorgeous tapestries, and superb pictures. The beautiful old residence, the center in the past of so much social entertainment now full of soldiers and it is very typical of the great changes the fire brought to every one no matter in what station of life they happened to be.

Another fine old residence in San Francisco is that of the Alexander Boyds, which has been leased for a term of years by Archbishop Riordan, and which is to be turned into a college.

The Boyds and Kitters and Will Taylors are among the heaviest losers in the San Francisco fire, and all their friends are exceedingly sorry for them.

CUPID IS KEPT BUSY.

Now that we have become used to the horror of the earthquake we have time to note some of the humorous spectacles of that terrible time. There were funny things. Among them was the desire of every engaged person to marry without waiting for the banns to be published. 'Understandings' that had 'hung fire' for many a long year, quite like a Mary Wilkins story, were hurried along and the weddings took place without any further preliminaries.

Weddings, the date for which had been already fixed, very sensibly, took place without any delay. For instance, the Goodfellow-Moore wedding took place Saturday without any guests except the members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

asked by telephone. The decorations of the Church of the Advent were simple but pretty and the bride, who is a handsome girl, was lovely in her wedding finery. The laces which had been part of Miss Goodfellow's trousseau and which had gone to the renovator's in San Francisco were not burned and were recovered in time to grace the wedding gown which, most fortunately, was not burned. Instead of the bevy of bridesmaids which had been planned, the bride had but one attendant, her most intimate friend Eleanor Davenport of San Francisco.

A delightful breakfast at the Goodfellow home followed, after which bride and groom left for Yosemite for several weeks. They could not have chosen a more quiet, lovely spot for a honeymoon than Yosemite nor one more remote from the terrible sights and scenes of the last few weeks. On their return the Moores will live in Oakland for a time, after which they will take up their permanent home across the bay.

The invitations which would have bidden hundreds of guests to the church were changed with pen and ink to announcements of the event—a pathetic little reminder of the terrible time we have just passed through.

YOUNG COUPLE IN THE RUINS.

One of the amusing sights at the ruined City Hall in San Francisco was the sight of young couples scrambling about among the ruins trying to find where marriage licenses were issued. As they usually refused to tell anyone what they were looking for they were considerably hampered in their search.

VISITING IN OAKLAND.

Mrs. Lloyd Baldwin, Lloyd Baldwin and Miss Grace Baldwin have been spending a few days with the de Fremerys but have now returned to their San Francisco home. The Baldwin home on Lyon street was not harmed by the earthquake though the Baldwin's moved their more precious things to the Presidio after the fire crossed Van Ness avenue and no one knew where it was going to stop. Russell Selfridge, Miss Baldwin's fiancé, and Lieutenant Russell Selfridge gave the Baldwin's every protection. The Selfridges, by the way, have gone to Willets where they have interests and the Selfridge home on California street is a military district headquarters. Lloyd Baldwin lost his library and books in the Crossley building.

SAN FRANCISCO'S BEAUTY AS A RUIN.

We have spent good duets going to Europe to see ruins and now we have one of the most beautiful of all ruins at our very doors. Everyone, however, should see it now before the ground is entirely covered with the mushroom redwood shacks which spring up everywhere in a night.

San Francisco is more beautiful as a ruin than she ever was as a city. Artists and architects from all over the country are exclaiming at this.

The old city was built so largely of wood that it had a ramshackle and temporary appearance, especially since the construction of 'fireproof' skyscrapers gave the note of contrast. Now San Francisco is a pink and white ruin. This is what interests the artists. You cannot walk over the rough cobbled streets with the pillars of stone and brick and gaunt chimneys rising on every side without being reminded at once of Pompeii. Everyone is struck by the resemblance. San Francisco is not an ugly and blackened ruin because the intense heat which prevailed when four square miles of the city were nothing but a fiery furnace. So enormous was the heat that window panes eight blocks from the fire were so hot that it was painful to touch them and this probably accounts for the rapid spread of the fire, everything being so hot and dry that it was ready to burst into flame before the necessary tinder alighted on the roof. Without one drop of water to cool the air one could see that it would be so. The large amount of dynamite used also blew fine white dust all over the ruins and today the wrecked city lies in loveliness, a sleeping beauty, ready to be aroused by the magic of the builders' kisser. Twelve minutes after the earthquake a watchman in a high tower counted thirty-five separate fires in the region south of Market street.

A PHOTOGRAPHER'S PARADISE.

Photographers are busy catching the lovely ruined forms before the dynamiter does his deadly work. Arnold Genthe is out all day with his camera taking pictures. He says they are beautiful but the most expensive pictures he ever took. While he was taking the first batch of them the flames leaped across the street unexpectedly and consumed forty thousand dollars' worth of negatives and Japanese prints and Dr. Genthe's lovely studio furniture.

A gifted Japanese photographer who took the finest panoramic city while it was in flames plates to a photographic firm.

CURIO SEEKERS.

Day after day people grub in the ruins but find nothing intense heat fused every friend who possessed magnifying glasses to save them were very heavy, thin they could easily be found in. They found the ends but remained of the huge bra.

go to their Grass Valley place for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. King, who have been spending a few days in Sacramento are now the guests of Mr. Hotaling at his Marin county ranch.

Miss Ina Coolbrith, concerning whose safety some anxiety was felt, as she was ill at the time of the quake, is with her life-long friend, Mrs. Bonit.

The Charles Wheelers are in town though their handsome home was heavily damaged and needs many repairs.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wheeler have left Berkeley and are again occupying their California-street home.

Miss Frances Joffie, who was in Europe, is on her way home.

A TONIC FOR NERVES.

Physicians who understand the value of "shock" in the treatment of nervous cases are not surprised that some nervous invalids are better than they have been for years. The wife of Judge Beatty of the Supreme Court has been a nervous invalid for years. She remains entirely recovered.

Richard Bayne, the prominent attorney, partner of Horace Platt, who has been an invalid for years and of whose connection with the physically fragile Horace it has been remarked that the firm was the nearest weight mentally and the lightest weight physically in the city, is looking and feeling better than he has for years.

INFORMAL EVENT.

One of the most interesting but very informal events of the week was the "at home" given by Miss Gertrude Allen, in honor of the Rev. Alexander Allen of St. Paul's Church. It was not meant to be a large social affair, but a reunion of members of St. Paul's parish, that they might meet and welcome the new pastor, and that all might enjoy a sociable evening together.

No formal invitations were sent out. Miss Allen simply announced that all the members of the parish would be welcome in her home.

Miss Allen is a charming hostess, and her friends have many happy memories of pleasant hours spent in her home. Mrs. Allen always enters heartily into the spirit of all her guests' plans, and she is a source of inspiration not only in her own home, but to her neighbors as well.

She has been a great invalid, but her influence has been more far-reaching than that of many of her more active friends. In a sweet inspiring way, she has meant a great deal in many lives.

The evening in the Allen home was most enjoyable, the guests being received by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allen, Miss Gertrude Allen and by the Rev. Alexander Allen.

St. Paul's Church numbers among its members many interesting people, among them Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crellin, Mrs. Isaac Requa, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Requa, General and Mrs. Oscar Long, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crellin, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brock, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Brown, Miss Mendenhall, Mrs. Everts, Mr. and Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. M. W. Kallen, Misses Kales, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Coghill, Miss Bessie Coghill, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Max Taft, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Taft, Miss Christie Taft, Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Louise Hall, Admiral and Mrs. Kutz, Miss Kitty Kutz.

CHARMING LITTLE ARTIST.

Among the charming little artists of today is Miss Dorothy Egbert, whose talent is attracting much attention among critics. Miss Egbert is a school girl, doing exceptionally good work in the Berkeley High School, and her friends are confident of much success for her in the future, along artistic lines. "Olla Podrida" is the school paper of the Berkeley High School, and the "Girl's Edition" has just been issued.

The frontispiece carries the name of Miss Dorothy Egbert. It is a most effective study of a girl's head—done in pen and ink. The shading is exceptionally fine, the lines of the face beautifully sketched, against a strong background made by a wide picture hat.

The study is exceptionally strong for so young a girl, and gives promise of much good work in the future from this talented little artist.

MR. SHARON HURRIED HOME.

When the news of the earthquake reached Nevada, William E. Sharon immediately hurried to Oakland, and he has been here ever since, helping many friends and relatives. Mrs. W. E. Sharon and Mrs. Peter C. Allen, who had been in the opera the night before, were on the top story of the Palace Hotel during the earthquake, and of course they were dreadfully frightened. They had many harrowing experiences during the day, being driven from the fire.

With them were Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Sharon. A. D. Sharon is on crutches, the result of rheumatism, and his flight from the pursuing fire was full of danger.

Mrs. Sharon and Mrs. Allen came around by the seawall, and a tug brought them across at nine o'clock to the Key Route depot.

The A. D. Sharons are heavy losers by the fire, having lost almost everything. They are now at the Sharon home at Piedmont. The Fred Sharons, who have been for many months in Paris, are also heavy losers by the fire, and are coming directly home from Paris.

Senator Newlands would have come to California, but he felt he could best serve the family interests by remaining in New York.

WEDDING OF MISS DE GOLIA.

The wedding of Miss Noelle De Golia, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. De Golia, and Mr. Challen Parker is set for next Thursday and will take place at the De Golia home on Harrison street.

It is to be a very quiet wedding, as befits the spirit of the day. Large social affairs are not in keeping just now with the general sentiment of the community. So many people are in serious trouble, that social demonstrations are much out of taste.

No bride-lect would have more social compliments offered her than charming Miss Noelle De Golia. The De Golia has always entertained in a most hospitable fashion, and their friends are so greatly indebted to them, that under other conditions a perfect round of gayety would be planned for this charming and very popular bride.

Miss De Golia is of the younger set of girls, and one of the most attractive of the bright bevy of young girls who have grown up, and who have had so many good times together.

Challen Parker comes of a family well known in Berkeley, and he is one of the prominent graduates of the University, and a well known fraternally man.

No formal invitations are to be sent out to the wedding. The bride will ask the friends she wishes in a most informal way. Only intimate friends and the members of both families will be present at the wedding.

The best man will be the groom's brother, Carl Parker, and the bride's only attendant will be Miss Clarisse Lobse.

Miss DeGolia and Miss Lobse have been great friends ever since the days when they began school together, somewhere in the primary grades.

After a wedding trip, the young people are to make their home with the De Golia until they establish their own permanent home. The wedding will take place quietly and informally, but it will be a wedding full of interest to a great many people.

WILL GO TO COUNTRY HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meek and their family will return next week to their country home near San Lorenzo. The Misses Meek expect to entertain many school friends there next summer.

SOCIAL LINES ARE DOWN.

Some of them never ought to have been up. But the catastrophe has been so entirely overwhelming that it has carried away most of the landmarks that we used to know. We will probably know them no more forever. Indeed, some of them we will most gladly forget.

The work of social reconstruction must be deferred. We are all living from day to day just now—nobody knows quite how much he has lost, and life is made up of helping each other, or being helped.

But we'll reach the social reconstruction in due time, and it will be interesting to note the families whose influence will dominate social life. We know now that never again will the "smart sets" of both sides of the bay present the same roll of names. A few remain, but the greater part have disappeared from the list.

Philanthropy for even the busiest of women is the order of the day.

Mrs. Eleanor Martin is at the head of a committee of ladies to distribute clothes to the needy, especially the clothes sent out by the kindness of William R. Hearst.

Mrs. Inez Shorb White has also forgotten that she ever planned a cotillion, and every day she is at Fort McSon, helping to distribute rations to those who need them. Colonel Draper has the assistance of his daughter, Dorothy Draper, in giving out rations, and across the bay Miss Ethel Hagar and her sister have been most helpful. The Merrill home was dynamited, but that does not hinder the usefulness of Mrs. John M. Merrill, and she is at the head of Red Cross affairs in San Francisco. The Maternity Home at the Traction Hospital has been established, and begins already to show the good work of the president, Mrs. Oscar Long, who has several committees of good workers.

Among those helping her are Mrs. Isaac Requa, Mrs. S. A. O'Neill, Mrs. Frank Havens, Mrs. Edward Engs, Miss Mabel Gray, Miss Mollie Connors, Mrs. A. D. Thomson, Mrs. Edward Engs, Mrs. William Havens, Mrs. E. J. Cotton, Mrs. Edgar Stone, Mrs. K. A. Bakley, Mrs. Max Marcus, Doctor Myra Knox, Mrs. Arthur Holland, Mrs. Joseph Mathews, Mrs. Harold Havens.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

In the large hall connected with Father McGweeney's school is a "Children's Home," where there are now thirty-five children. They belong to mothers who must work, but who wish their little children cared for till they can provide a home for them. They present a series of most interesting pictures. There are ten dear little babies, whom the older children help to amuse. The hall has kitchens, bath-rooms, dormitories—a regular home and safe asylum for these little ones. An interesting picture the other day showed the children shelling peas for the family dinner. The little ones seem well, and safe and happy, and their mothers can work with much more hope and courage since this safe shelter is assured for them.

WILL TRY TENT LIFE.

Mackenzie Gordon, the well known singer and Bohemian Club favorite, will try tent life for the summer of 1906 in Mill Valley. He has secured quarters immediately adjacent to the residence of Emile Pohl, and will take in a few pupils to tide over the financial infirmities due to the San Francisco calamity.

Mr. Gordon has a wonderful voice. It is said by musical critics that he ranks next to Caruso as a singer. Certainly the range, power and sweetness fill all who hear him with delighted astonishment. His musical accomplishments are so varied that he is a delightful companion.

Mr. Gordon lost all his belongings save the clothes on his back in the fire, and these were utterly ruined by his labors in the dynamite gang. For two days and nights he worked incessantly dynamiting buildings to check the fire, coming out at the finish begrimed and unshorn and with blood-shot eyes to collect a new wardrobe and make a fresh start. Over in Mill Valley he will take it easy during the heated term, giving singing lessons to keep the wolf from poking his nose in at the tent door.

BERNHARDT AT THEATER.

Everybody went to hear Bernhardt, the wonderful, magnetic, fascinating, splendid Greek Theater. We never grow accustomed to the Greek Theater. Its picturesqueness always strikes us anew. Its lines are so classic, so magnificent, its situation against a background of hills, so picturesque, so beautiful, so strong.

The great splendid environment of the out door world adds to its charm. The towering ever green eucalyptus adds to the charm, and their low murmur as they sway in the wind adds a happy accompaniment to life.

ing of the little birds, for they always come to the Greek Theater, they too love it. One is so far up in the hills, one feels the strength the uplift of the mountains. Far below is the day's work. Here is life among the higher levels.

How much that magnificent Greek Theater has done for us all! How often we have come down the hillside, strengthened, ennobled, for the hours we have spent there. Great things have we seen in that Greek Theater, but never anything greater, than Bernhardt's "Phedra."

It was one of the characteristic audiences we are now accustomed to see in the Greek Theater. For anything there worth while we can count on an audience of seven thousand people. They come early, for almost all of them have preferences in regard to their seats.

On Thursday the procession began early to wend its way up the hillside, in the immensely picturesque way characteristic of the Greek Theater audience. Most people have very little money, but they tried to see Bernhardt. After the toil and the stress and the fear and the suffering of the past days it was good to get over the side of the artistic, to be carried out of one's self by the greatness of dramatic power—to climb the heights of high art, led by the greatest actress of modern times.

One has heard much of Bernhardt's age, as though age really had very much to do with genius. We saw for ourselves out in the Greek Theater on Thursday that Bernhardt was intensely fascinating, with a voice of wonderful quality, sweet, penetrating, of rare beauty.

We all know the story of "Phedra," we all had to read Racine in our school days, and knowing the story we could quite easily follow Bernhardt, in that wonderful beautiful French.

How proud we were of our enthusiastic Californians. Americans are usually so cold, that it is heart-breaking to a foreigner who is accustomed to the frankly expressed opinions of the Mediterranean countries. Such shouts and cheers as went up from that big Greek Theater for Madame Bernhardt! The thousands of people recalled her again and again, they crowded about the stage, refusing to let the great actress go. They were stirred far beyond any conventions of the day, carried far beyond any ordinary enthusiasm. People who followed her about were moved to tears, stirred to a frenzy.

And the "great Sarah" herself has given California something to remember when she says: "You have seen the best that Sarah Bernhardt has to offer. I have never had such inspiration. I have never played in such a theater before such an audience. Thousands! Thousands! the ladies waving their handkerchiefs and the shouting of the men! In all my life there is no other day to match it!"

Ashton Stevens commentary is well worth quoting. "We shall never see her again—never see her in that simple regal robe of velvet, girdled by a massive belt of raw carved gold—never again hear the more than gold of her perennially youthful voice. But the memory of her will haunt the noble theater in which she gave her noblest piece of portraiture; already it has become the Greek Theater's most priceless tradition."

We have had a terrific earthquake—a tremendous fire—and Sarah Bernhardt.

THOUGHTFUL INCIDENTS.

Among the many thoughtful incidents of the late trying days was one planned by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The ladies of the society wished to be helpful in the great emergency, so they quietly found out that they might be helpful at the Traction Hospital. They planned comfortable beds for the sick people—each member sending or personally bringing in a carriage one equipment.

The latter consisted of a comfortable mattress, two feather pillows, sheets, pillow cases, blankets, and two night gowns.

And there were twelve of these equipments presented to the Traction Hospital by individual members of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

It was a most thoughtful act, and brought comfort where it was most needed to sick and weary refugees.

AT HOUGHTON HOME.

Mrs. Houghton and Miss Minnie Houghton are still with the Charles Houghton's on Harrison street. Their home and much of their property was destroyed in San Francisco. The Houghtons usually spend the summer at the Hotel Vendome.

POPULAR BRIDE.

Miss Beptha Goodrich is one of the very popular brides-elect of the spring, and she was to have had an elaborate church wedding.

But the pretty and popular bride lost in the fire her beautiful wedding gown and an elaborate trousseau.

The wedding is to take place at the country home of the Goodriches. It will be an outdoor wedding, and among the interesting bridesmaids will be the Misses Goodrich and Miss Edna Orr.

LIFE A SERIES OF MOVING PICTURES.

Life is a series of moving pictures—just now, not all of them of deepest gloom. There is one thing about the great fire, people who have lost everything are not bitter. No one is bitter. Everyone seems composed, calm, impassive. Perhaps it is because the earthquake was so terrific, that the gladness of families to be alive and together dominates everything else.

Never before have people been so entirely helpful, offering assistance in a sweet unselfish way, that it goes to one's heart. And the assistance is accepted as frankly as it is offered.

Never in the history of California have the storekeepers seen so much currency and that is proof of the great kindness of the East, of its instant response to our needs. When our banks were closed, and we could cash no checks, we sent frantic telegrams East, and in response as fast as the train could bring it, came currency from the East for our daily needs. Wells Fargo and the telegraph companies tell stories of the magnificently generous response from the East, and the gratitude of California, cannot find adequate expression in words.

Oakland is so changed these days. The streets show constantly shifting crowds of people. Time was, when one knew many people on Broadway. Now it is we who are in the minority. The strangers are here, and here it is quite evident, most of them mean to stay.

The only inhospitable thing that has been heard over here in the past month was said by a little woman who looked up and down the crowded street.

"I wish all these people would go home," she said.

"But they haven't any home to go to, this is home," answered her friend.

And even though many of the business houses must return to locations across the bay, this is to be the future home of hundreds of people. Everywhere one hears of touching things. There are hundreds of pathetic stories that go to one's heart. You hear of big firms trying to take back old employees, who are willing to come at reduced wages. The business is almost ruined, but employers are trying as far as possible to care for those who for years have been dependent upon them. And the latter must make great sacrifices if they are to live at all. There is no need to preach "the simple life" to dwellers around the bay just now.

You hear of servants offering their little hoard of savings to the mistress of the household, and offering to remain and share the family fortunes, without any hope of ever being paid for their work.

Many a former servant has sheltered a former mistress and her family in just now.

Some unpretentious little home in the past trying month. For the servants have their little hoard of savings, while the wealth of the master and mistress has been suddenly swept away. Great things have happened to San Francisco. There has been a great earthquake a great fire, and out of it has come a great experience to the people. Something splendid in character growth has come to them, something deep and ennobling. It is significant of the strength of the Sierras, of the dignity of the Pacific. It is worth having endured much to have achieved it.

THE MEDDLER.

Scotches Cured After Twenty Years of Torture. For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey, of 222 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by scotches. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. Mr. Massey relates his experience for the benefit of others who may be similarly afflicted. If troubled with scotches or rheumatism why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. # EVERY LINE OF BUSINESS IN OAKLAND RUN TO ITS GREATEST CAPACITY

Daily Inauguration of Industries, Which Have Come Here to Stay, Giving Employment to Hundreds---All City Taxes Near Paid and Still no Scarcity of Money With Which to Do Business---Suggested Plan for the Daily Registering of Arrival and Departure of Ships in Harbor---Busy Water-Front Scene.

The business of the realty world during the present week has shown a decided improvement over that of last week. There has been more inquiries and more sales than during any week since the interruption of the business of the city by the destruction of the metropolis on the other side of the bay.

Few purchases have been made for speculative purposes because people generally have been husbanding their resources. While the banks have been liberal in supplying means for the safe conduct of business, and while the volume of money in circulation has been such as to cause no stint in essentials or necessities, at the same time money has not been loaned in quantities to warrant indiscriminate investment.

ALL THE MONEY NEEDED.
"We have all the money that we need for the accommodation of our patrons and enabling the merchants of this city to conduct their business as they conducted it before trouble was experienced."

That was the manner in which a local banker described the situation to THE TRIBUNE reporter, and the words expressed the sentiment of all the men in his line of business in this city.

This condition has had a grateful effect upon the people of Oakland and vicinity. It has inspired confidence, and, as a consequence, the banks have not experienced anything in the way of the annoyance from customers in times less troublous and trying than those through which the city has just passed.

RUSH OF MONEY CONTINUES.
With the opening of the doors of the local banks to their depositors and patrons, has come a rush of money from all sources, from new local depositors, from banks at a distance and from insurance companies who desire to be ready to pay losses when the same shall have been demonstrated.

As a consequence, there is now more money in the banks of Oakland than was ever known to be there in the financial history of this city.

When that money shall reach those for whom it is intended, lively periods may be expected along many lines. Before the obligations of those insurance companies can be discharged millions of dollars must be set free, and then will come the time when it is to be hoped, as a local banker put it, "that the people will keep their heads."

SOME SALES MADE.
And yet there have been a number of small sales and several large ones. One of these was the purchase of the Merritt House property on the northeast corner of Twelfth and Franklin streets, one of the finest locations in this city.

Some months before the fire it was understood that the property was on the market, and an offer of about $80,000 was made for it without effect. Seventy and, later, $80,000 and finally $90,000 was offered. This indicated that the property was in demand, and it was accordingly removed from the market.

Then came the rush of merchants and men of means looking for both quarters and chance for investment. And, finally, the owner's price was reached, and the property was knocked down for about $125,000. The Oakland Chamber of Commerce has a lease of the first floor of the building for three years. The purchasers, Friedman Brothers of San Francisco, will convert the structure into a wholesale and retail furniture store.

OLD COLLEGE HALL.
Another purchase was made by A. J. Snyder, who secured possession of the property at the northeast corner of Harrison and Twelfth streets, now occupied by the Club scabies. The property has a frontage of 225 feet on Harrison. The structure which now covers part of the lot was formerly "College Hall," one of the structures of the California College, out of which grew the University of California. The price is said to be in the vicinity of $110,000. The property will eventually be improved and devoted to mercantile purposes.

INCREASE IN BUSINESS.
There is no line of business in this city, wholesale or retail, which has not greatly increased since April 18. In some instances it has doubled and even quadrupled. There has had to be an increase in the number of attaches in all the largest places of trade. This of them having added as many as twenty or twenty-five to their working forces.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.
But in no place is this activity more noticeable than in the hotels and restaurants. While all of them had done a paying business before the influx from San Francisco, there is none of them which is not now in effect, coining money, or, as a commission man put it, "making fortunes."

Thus far there has been no increase in the number of the large places, but the smaller eating-houses are now legion.

The opening of the Forum, in which a fortune has already been expended, has been delayed by the destruction in San Francisco, of the chinaware, nappery and other things intended for it. The date of the inaugural has not yet been announced.

New people from San Francisco, who formerly conducted the Oyster Loaf there, have purchased the Merchants for $12,000. Starr & Co., it is said, will establish another restaurant in the old Empire Theater on Twelfth street, and other San Franciscans, it is reported, will open a restaurant on the west side of Broadway between Ninth and Tenth streets.

On the whole, there is reason for contentment on the part of the people generally because business is brisk, money is plentiful, work is on every hand, and the future is without suggestion of a cloud.

INDUSTRIES WHICH INCREASE POPULATION.

The building record, which elsewhere appears in this department, shows that the locating of large and well-established firms and industries of San Francisco is still in progress. It also shows that local concerns are prospering, and indicate this by the making of arrangements for the construction by business men of commodious additions to their present concerns or by large individual establishments in which to accommodate increasing patronage.

WHAT OAKLAND WELCOMES.
Among the things which are well-come to Oakland at all times, as well as residences and citizens, are manufacturing, warehouses, offices, machine shops and, indeed, industries of all kinds.

These are specially welcome because they always bring with them employees who depend upon them for maintenance. These employees are, as a general thing, here to establish their homes in congenial spots near their place of employment, and thus swell the population. For a long time operatives who follow industries to this side of the bay will remain here and will eventually make this place their home.

HIVES OF INDUSTRY.
In the building record referred to, it is shown that during the past week provision has been made for the erection of the following hives of industry, which will doubtless attract a number of desirable citizens to this place:

Factories—Main & Winchester Stone Co., L. H. Briggs.
Warehouses—Empire Construction Co., George Roth; Kiel & Evans, five-story; Western Union Telegraph Co.; Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson; South Pacific Coast R. R. Co.; E. Martin & Co.; W. H. Sawtelle; San Francisco News Co.
Offices—Standard Gas Co.; Standard Oil Co.
Machine shops—M. Freeman; Mills Novelty Co.

THE TRIBUNE has published the names of hundreds of concerns which have already located here, but, despite this fact, the list, to be complete, must be added to, from time to time.

RETRIEVING PRESTIGE.
Among San Francisco concerns which are engaged in retrieving their old prestige here may be mentioned the California Bottling and Supply Company, of 119 and 121 Mission street, which is now in the quarters of the Bay City Iron Works, and the Western Gas Engine Company, which is also located in the building of the Bay City Iron Works. In the same structure are Berger Carter Company, which manufactures machinery, and A. E. Chodsko, who conducts mechanical drawing and acts as consulting engineer.

A short distance to the south on Washington near Second street is located the Parcels Safe Company, whose factory was on Washington street, between Third and Fourth streets, San Francisco.

of the fire on hand, some of which have not been opened since the calamity.

HEAVY IRON CENTER.
These firms have been attracted to the quarter mentioned by the fact that many of the old established iron works of this city are located in that neighborhood. That section will henceforth be specially devoted to heavy manufacturing.

In addition to the industries which were treasury would be take that amount out of general circulation, where it was needed, and place it in the treasury where it could do no good for months at least. At length, however, a change in the sentiment took place and city taxes were accepted, and so immediate was the response that all save a few thousand dollars have passed into the treasurer's vaults. At the same time, the money those who are interested in the commerce of the Pacific.

With a daily report of vessels arriving at and departing from the "Port of Oakland," people at a distance would get an idea of the added importance of this city. Every city which is so situated as to be able to have ships arrive at and depart from its wharves should advertise the fact to the utmost.

With such a record it would be possible suggestions he will make to enhance it. A letter from Mayor Mott to Mr. Robinson is on its way to the latter in his home in the East, instructing to forward his report as soon as possible.

Mr. Robinson went East before the earthquake. Because of his preoccupation as a consequence of that catastrophe, Mayor Mott wrote the expert telling him to not send his report until further instructions on the subject should reach him. The mayor was not anxious to receive the report when the people were in a state of mental unrest, worry and physical suffering.

He received a note in reply from Robinson, to the effect that the latter had started to typewrite the report.

OFFERED REPORT AT ONCE.
More recently, Robinson said he thought it would be better to send the report on at once, and if any additional views on the subject should be needed, they could follow.

The mayor has accordingly ordered the report to be sent here, as also a map of the proposed embellishment of City Hall Park.

MANY WHEELS OF GIANT FACTORY BEGIN TO SPIN.

Today, one of the largest factories, formerly of San Francisco, is thoroughly domesticated in Oakland and today also sets its wheels moving, thus becoming one of the large forces in the development of this city.

The institution in question is the Union Gas Engine Company, which is situated near the eastern end of the estuary and a couple of blocks south of the California Cotton Mills.

These works for years were established on First street in San Francisco. The business of the concern, however, had outgrown its quarters and, after considering a number of sites offered, the management decided to locate in this city.

The building on the site referred to was nearly complete when almost every factory in San Francisco was laid low by the fire and the company had that advantage over other firms who had lost everything in the way of machinery and structures and who could not hope to do much in the way of rehabilitation for weeks at least.

INSTALLED MACHINERY.
At the time also, the new plant had some of its machinery installed. In cars near its ground were other contrivances waiting to be installed. Immediately, orders were sent to various places for tools and machinery to be rushed here with the result that the new enterprise was able to be inaugurated today.

There are forty-five men on the payroll now and when more machinery arrives, this number will be increased, because the purpose of the company is to give employment to four hundred. They will now be able to employ many more men than they did formerly because their output is in great demand and because, for a number of months at least, the concern will have little opposition until its rivals can get their shops in operation.

OPERATIVES RESIDE HERE.
The structure has a frontage of 175 feet on the waterfront and a length, from east to west, of 850 feet. All the operatives at present reside in this city and have established homes here. The pay-roll of the concern will run up to many thousands every month, the most of which will be spent in this city.

ONE HUNDRED NEW BUILDINGS IN A WEEK.

This has been a busy week in the office of the Board of Public Works. Thousands of people have called there in that period, to get permits for the inspection and restoration of chimneys, and among them have been numbers of building contractors of all kinds who have gone there to secure permits to erect dwellings, stores, factories, warehouses and, indeed, all kinds of structures which are deemed essential to the business life of a prosperous community.

BUILDINGS AND SPENDING.
The buildings and the repairs which these permits allow will cost according to the showing of the application, $124,000. This has a two-fold meaning. It indicates, in the first place, that property to that amount will be added to the taxable value of the city and in the second place, that that sum of money will be spent among the contractors and money will be put into circulation among the tradesmen of the city and they, in turn, be benefited by it. But is not all

EXPENDITURES DOUBLED.
To furnish these houses, stock stores and equip the factories will require more than double this sum, the greater part of that sum will be expended in this city and this will still further benefit the community. It is customary, however, for contractors in securing permits, to construct buildings underestimate the value rather than the right value of the proposed structures. Extras generally cost from ten to twenty-five per cent over and above estimate and that additional sum will eventually find its way among the people. As a consequence the work of construction here provided for this week means that at least $250,000 will change hands and be added to the bank accounts of citizens in this community.

INDICATION OF HEALTH.
Aside from these facts, the necessity for such structures which is shown by the securing of permission to put them up indicates a healthy condition of trade and manufactures in this city. It indicates prosperity and progress. It shows that Oakland is growing and daily getting nearer to the attainment of her hopes as the metropolis on the western side of the continent.

Another cheerful view which is suggested by this showing is that many of the dwellings which have been asked for are to be paid for by people who have come from San Francisco after having suffered the destruction of their homes in San Francisco. These have become permanent residents of this city and have come so because of conviction that this is an ideal spot for an abode, more especially when the abode places may be established within a short distance of where one changes in his daily avocation. In most instances the people were refugees from the destruction and here found rest, shelter, to be content and sympathy as they remain.

referred to in this department last week as having been installed near Emeryville, may be mentioned the Union Elrod and Ladder Company, which is erecting a warehouse 75x125 feet near the intersection of Peralta and Harlan streets. This will be a permanent industry.

REGISTER COMMERCE OF OAKLAND HARBOR.

"The Chamber of Commerce should immediately perfect a system of recording the arrival and departure of vessels from the harbor of Oakland," said an enterprising citizen to THE TRIBUNE reporter today.

It may be stated, by way of explanation, that this subject was brought to the attention of some members of that organization soon after its inception. The Chamber, however, has since been devoting its energies to the relief of refugees, but will soon be able to confine itself uninterruptedly to subjects affecting the commercial interests of the city.

IMPORTANCE OF RECORD.
The establishment of a systematic report of the kind suggested is of even more importance now than it was before the fire, because the number of arrivals of vessels in this harbor is greater today than it ever was before.

The vessels dock all along the harbor, sometimes at great distances from the heart of the city. Despite that fact, their arrival is of interest to most and of importance to a number of people, especially paid into the treasury does not seem to have been missed.

RAPID PAYMENT OF CITY TAXES.

Good citizenship and proof of the fact that there is plenty of money in this city are indicated by the fact that there is still due, of the present installment of city taxes, fewer than $70,000. This sum is daily being decreased by payments, and it is now the impression of City Treasurer Bates that the delinquency in the pay of taxes will not exceed $20,000.

The small quantity which still remains to be collected will be a surprise to most people, for the reason that the city treasurer's office was closed for several weeks, and during that time no taxes were paid because of the existence of legal holidays.

Besides, leading financiers were averse to having the office kept open during the holidays, more especially if they were expected to furnish money for the payment of taxes.

MONEY OUT OF CIRCULATION.
These held that to put money into the

A. C. HENRY TELLS OF THE 1849 AND 1906

San Francisco Will Be Rebuilt by Men of Courage.

By Ex-Mayor A. C. HENRY

Editor TRIBUNE: As one of the old pioneers of the Pacific Coast allow me, in my humble way, to give you a short history of California from memory of my experience in the past fifty-seven years of what I have seen and gone through in assisting in building up the cities, towns and business of our great and glorious State, then having the sad experience of seeing many of our prosperous business cities and towns, both on the bay of San Francisco and in the valley of the Sacramento, also in the mountains, almost swept from the face of the earth by earthquake, fire and water.

Twice I have viewed the destruction of the greater portion of the city of San Francisco. The first time was on May 4, 1851, when the city was destroyed by fire, every house from the foot of Telegraph Hill, on the north, to Pine street, on the south, up to the old plaza, excepting a few houses on the east side of the plaza to the waters of the bay were cleaned out. I viewed the destruction from the top of a hill now known as Nob Hill a few days after the fire and could see nothing of the great city of San Francisco but a desert covered with rubbish and ashes.

The second disaster occurred on April 18, 1906. When San Francisco was again destroyed by the most disastrous catastrophe that was ever experienced on the Pacific Coast by fire and earthquake, the destruction of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of property and from three to five hundred lives of her citizens lost. I will not undertake to describe the scene as I viewed the destruction.

In November, 1852, Sacramento city, one of the most important business cities in the Sacramento valley, was visited by fire which destroyed the whole business portion of the city from about Twelfth street on the east, I street on the north, to M street on the south, west to the river front, making a clear sweep of everything that was burnable, leaving an area of wreck and ruin, but the citizens went to work to rebuild the city immediately. When it was partly rebuilt the rainy season set in and it rained and rained, until the city was surrounded by water, completely flooding every part of the city. The levee on the American river broke at Rabie's Tannery and within forty-eight hours the city was flooded with water from two to ten feet deep.

Now, my fellow citizens, can you imagine the situation and condition of the people of that young city of a population of six to eight thousand at that early history of the country and compare it to our misfortune at the present time?

Allow me to endeavor to explain the two situations of the country in 1851-2 and 1906. In the early settlement of the coast by the Americans San Francisco was the metropolis as she is now of the Pacific Coast, when everything in the way of provisions and clothing that was used had to be transported from the Atlantic Coast and Chile by steamers that made monthly trips from Panama and by sailing vessels around the Horn, which took eight to ten months or one year to make the voyage to San Francisco, while now we have two great transcontinental railroads to the Atlantic Coast, with all their connections, which can deliver in San Francisco within four days thousands of tons of provisions and clothing to relieve us of our unfortunate condition, for which I am unable to find words to thank them for their generosity. Did the citizens of San Francisco and Sacramento after the fire lie down and cry quit? Not much. The pioneers knew no such word as failure. They stood shoulder to shoulder and rebuilt the city larger and better than before.

As for my misfortunes caused by fire, my partners and myself were burned out clean of everything three times in about eight years in Georgetown, Eldorado county.

I have heard that some weak kneed citizens are reporting that the city will never be rebuilt. If the reports are true, we all will chip in a few dollars to send all such weak back, chicken hearted men to some other country, as we have no room nor use for their kind. I am no prophet or the son of a prophet, but I am willing to bet dollars against a white bean that San Francisco will be rebuilt inside of five or six years, larger and better than she ever was.

What! talk about the enterprising and energetic middle aged and young business men of San Francisco getting weak and losing their courage and grit!

If any one has gotten that idea in his head he is not aware that there are thousands and tens of thousands of the middle aged and young progeny of the old pioneer stock, whose blood courses through their veins, that never recognize failure. That same energetic and enterprising blood, encouraged and assisted by other enterprising men, will rebuild, and the result will be a monument to the work of the courageous and enterprising people of California.

To my fellow citizens of San Francisco and Oakland we must stand shoulder to shoulder, put arms and backs and bold hearts to the wheel of success and lift the city out of its distress and desolation. Adopt the motto of the old pioneers of '49 when they crossed the Missouri river and bid goodbye to the white settlement and started on the long journey of two thousand miles to the Pacific Coast, through a wilderness then inhabited by the Red man of the forest, with the prairie schooner propelled by the gentle ox and patient mule, painted on the starboard side "California or bust."

We will adopt their motto on our banner and throw it to the breeze with letters embellished with gold, "Greater San Francisco," or die in the harness.

A. C. HENRY.

Oakland, May 19, 1906.

ICEMEN LANDED IN LOCKUP

Almost crazed by their desire for liquor, which was refused them, William Hamilton and John Klass, ice wagon drivers, created a disturbance in Emeryville Thursday night and abused Mrs. Frank Rose, wife of a saloon keeper, until she screamed for help and they were taken into custody by the police. They are now confined in the county jail charged with disturbing the peace.

Hamilton and Klass went to Rose's saloon considerably the worse for liquor, according to Rose, and demanded whisky. They were refused and told to leave the place, which they did after having words with the bartender. Rose lives with his family over the saloon and the men after being ejected from the saloon, went to the residence of the bartender, where they drank from her. She indignantly told them she did not sell liquor, whereupon, it is claimed, they began abusing her. Their unseemly language caused Mrs. Rose to call for her husband, who summoned Deputy Marshal Hickey and had them arrested. They will appear before Justice of the Peace Quinn tomorrow.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by Osgood Bros., Broadway, corner 7th and Washington, corner 12th.

Here is our very best vineyard proposition, and we guarantee it as represented:
$10,500—100 acres, absolutely level land almost adjoining Livermore from San Francisco, 33 acres in full bearing vineyard; 6-room, shod residence, painted; beautiful shade trees, large barn, 50x64, 4 chicken houses; with the place go 3 good horses, 3 cows, surrey, 2 wagons, cultivator and all implements: the owner of this place is now in the city and is worth between $30,000 and $40,000, and he made every off this place: the only reason for sale is that he wants to retire and trade this for gilt-edge city income property. Remember, this place adjoins the town. We consider it worth at a low estimate $10,000.

GOSSIP FROM THE SAN FRANCISCO WEEKLIES

THOSE DISHONEST BUILDERS.

The proof that San Francisco's great loss was due mainly to the dishonesty of builders is so overwhelming that I am unable to account for the indifference of the committees on plans for reconstruction to so important a fact. Those committees are spreading the report broadcast that the buildings that best stood the shock are the tall buildings with steel skeletons. That is absolutely untrue. Moreover, it is ludicrous to the city, since it implies that the shock was so severe that it shattered all brick buildings that were without steel frames. As little as the steel framed buildings suffered, there was not one that was not damaged more by the earthquake than the old Montgomery block, than all the old buildings along Montgomery street, from Washington to Jackson, than the old granite building at the northwest corner of Montgomery and California streets, than the old Mission Church, than the brick buildings in the Presidio, than the old Palace Hotel, than the Appraiser's Building, than, indeed, any of the old brick or stone buildings built before the days in which steel frames were used, and before the days in which graft became a feature of the builders' trade. The steel framed building, ornamented by heavy pieces of granite, is, perhaps, to be preferred to all others, but let us not misrepresent the effect of the earthquake to our own injury. Brick buildings in the construction of which no grafter had a hand stood the shock. Even brick chimneys on wooden buildings stood the shock in all sections of the city, a notable example being the chimneys on the Lent residence on Eddy street, erected by the Mahoney Brothers, whose work so nobly stood the test all over town that I am constrained to give them a free ad. I mention the Lent residence because I have been told that Eugene Lent complained of the charge that was made for those chimneys, and that since the earthquake he wrote a letter of apology to Jerry Mahoney. The Mahoney Brothers built the Flood Building and the St. Francis, but they are not doing any pointing with pride at this time. It is not necessary for them to do any tooting of their own horns. They are on the roll of honor. Wouldn't it be well to have a roll of honor?—Town Talk.

IT'S ON AGAIN.

When Joe Eastland departed for New York some months ago it was reported that he carried with him a very heavy heart, a circumstance attributed to the sundering of tender ties. A short while before the gossips were saying that the young capitalist had won the hand of that very elusive maiden, Pearl Landers, and that he was as happy as a young king with a new crown and a raise of salary. But it subsequently appeared that the course of true love had a pebble in it. The gossips say that Joe was put on probation and slipped a cog, but whatever happened it becomes the duty of The Spectator to report the observation of evidence pointing to the restoration of the entente cordiale. The engagement, I am told, is on again. The other day Miss Landers and Mr. Eastland were seen emerging from a bakery in Fillmore street, and Joe was loaded down with pastry.—Town Talk.

JOSAPHARE SINGS OF BOHEMIA

In Coppa's, on the night of May seventh, there assembled that bunch of Bohemians by which the little Italian restaurant that has survived seismic disturbance and devastating flames was made famous. Lionel Josaphare was elected poet laureate of the occasion. Porter Garnet wanted the job, but he was barred, owing to the fact that since the catastrophe he dropped out of journalism to become a hotel clerk. Josaphare commemorated the occasion in these lines:

Adieu to the earthquake, farewell to the flames—
And twelve of us wassailed in bottles
Our hearts and the ruins still played the old games.
For the business of hearts is to run and burn.
'Twas at Coppa's, where oft we had hung
The confetti—
(We didn't do that—I aver the thing said.)
To make the line rhyme with his glowing spaghetti—
And also, in posing, his famed tail-die.
Around us, Destruction had painted in black
The bricks and the beams of the tumble-down city.
Night gave to the scene an impressionist smudge,
We pitied the smash-up and dand in our pity.
Why not? By eternity beauty is tender.
There are gems all around us, wherever we glance
The city had fallen wide, ended on cin-der.
Like ghosts we returned there and laughed in a trance.
Of the women and men of us, there was a best
A prettiest, merriest, bravest in brawl,
Gladdest, loveliest, brainiest, quickest in jest
Wissest, staunchest, and finest and greatest of all
Gone where the subtle, resort-fed wil-ers,
Sleek, slow-eyed, cash-registering Pol-ies
Was gone.
'Twas a donation feast eaten by the do-nators
Or one table only out candles, three, shone.
But around in the shadow a phantasma-goria
Of memories dined with us, noddy and gleamed.
Dear unknown friends and many a glory a Man would give half of his soul to've redeemed.
There seemed the dim cheek my own oft Glimped at (It's blushing, I mean) and there the blond lass
At whose onetime glances full often I'd winked at.
And there one to whom I'd oft lifted my glass.
In fancy's far colors they spectrally sat—
O lavenders, purples, pale grays and faint yellow—
The women and men with Bohemian chat;
The maidens light-laughing at devilish fellows.
When erstwhile we dined at the good cen-ter table,
We looked at those people as mere deco-rations
They figured us part of the show to en-able
Them more to enjoy their inane mas-ti-cations.
A trick of the brain! ('Tis easy for genius
Though our food had been recently quite unwholesome—
A diet corn-beefy, mixed-pickly, sar-dineous
No matter; the vision is gone for the time.
Thus hedged in with flame-eaten alleys and cauldrons,
Full enough at Coppa's we mumbled and laughed
The camp-dress, the sentries, the night-doubling vassals,
Keep guard on the street; to them let us quit.
Good luck to the army that took such good care of us
Good luck to the earthquake that brought us all here!
The sounds of our city are gone from the face of us
To the music that's left let us still lay an ear
So here's to the twelve of us! Here's to the best,
And the prettiest, merriest, bravest in brawl,
Gladdest, loveliest, brainiest, quickest in jest
Wissest, staunchest and finest and great-est of all.

CHAMPAGNE WILL FLOW

When the cafes and clubs of San Francisco were put out of business most of the champagne agents went into mourning. It was supposed that the flow of wine would be shut off for quite a while, but there is one champagne firm that was quick to vindicate the confidence in the ability of the people of San Francisco to get back on their feet. As soon as the Piper Heidsieck firm learned of the destruction of the Chauche & Bon vineyard negotiations were entered into with Tom McCann, the man that made those wines famous, and he was offered the agency of the whole coast for the Piper Heidsieck champagnes, clarets and sauternes. He is now the Pacific Coast representative of the great French firm.—Town Talk.

SAN FRANCISCO DESOLATE.

The London papers made great demand on Scheffauer's pen for articles on San Francisco, and he wrote several. He also wrote a poem for "The Spectator," a copy of which he enclosed. It is the only red-blooded poem that, to my knowledge, the theme has evoked. It is a poem that awakens in the mind a series of thrilling images and throughout there is a note of anguish that is soul-stirring. It is entitled "San Francisco Desolate":

Ruin outraced the dawn,
When the ports of night were drawn,
The feast of Death lay spread,
The city bowed low her head,
In confusion in the moon,
Sitting amidst her dead—
Forsaken O forlorn!
Lo! how the torch of day
Rolloth in pity away
Over the graves and the fires,
And the houses drop a tall spire
Affect and broken in dust
Weed on thine ashes and pyres,
Young Queen, once august!
Flame had goaded the ground,
And the valves of the deep profound Ran through their riven lock
She felt the wrath of the shock,
And a storm upheaved her floor—
Down saw the grave that crowned
My city—no more
Woe hath befell'n thee
And thou wincest in my cry
Thy bleeding departing hands
Over thine agonized brow
For a great grief came to pass,
Thy beauty is prey to the brands
My city, alas!
Thou wepest mother mine
For the dear dead face is there,
And the dear face of thy tears,
Is not one of days, but years.
The ashes he may on thy head
And deep is the wound and thy tears
Lie down with the dead.
Splendor of thine and pride
Are departed, the waves deride
Thee and thy sisters sore,
And hisp and laugh on the shore
And the sun is brave with gold
But the sea and the sun no more
Know thee—as of old.
Reinount, O Queen resume
The throne of thy hills, through the Forest
And the dolor and terror that reign
Over thy walls, thou shalt lift again
Thy face. Thy sons shall restore Anew from the wastes of thy pain
Thy splendor, once more

OBSERVING THE PATTENED HAWAIIAN.

Dr. E. H. Woolsey, citizen of Oakland and the world, has returned from a brief trip to the Sandwich Islands. In the experience of any other traveler a voyage to Hawaii is a mere episode, a pleasure jaunt, an "outing"; but when Dr. Woolsey travels there is something doing all the time. Dr. Woolsey does not travel wholly for pleasure, although traveling is an intensely pleasurable occupation for him—he travels to observe; to increase his knowledge of men, women, customs, manners and institutions; to analyze, digest and assimilate that which he observes. For example, in his brief contact with the people of Hawaii, Dr. Woolsey observed that their stomachs are abnormally protuberant, and incidentally he remarked that while the male population flaunted their deformity, so to speak, the female sought modestly to conceal it with the voluminous folds of a Mother Hubbard wrapper in the morning and the loose drapery of an old-fashioned Empire gown in the evening. Naturally, Dr. Woolsey, his scientific curiosity fully aroused, directed his investigation to a solution of the mystery of this universal stomach, this common abdominal expansion, so to speak, of the Hawaiian anatomy; for the Oakland scientist observed that the characteristic was not confined to the native, but manifested itself in the structural contour of all that had become acclimated to the Hawaiian environment; he met the stomach at every turn in front of every old resident of the islands whether American, English, Japanese, Chinese, or missionary. He observed also that the size of the stomach varied in direct ratio to the time of residence—in those who had lived in the islands only a year the distention was not more marked than it is in the ordinary fat man of the mainland, but in those who had lived there many years the distention was frequently enormous, often extending throughout the entire hypochondriac and epigastric region and apparently involving the diaphragm and the transverse colon, and certainly ballooning the middle of the victim from the cardiac orifice to the pyloric valve, and probably including the superior processes of the diaphragm.

POI AND ITS AWFUL CONSEQUENCE.

It is possible that the occasional undue prominence of his own abdominal structure gawzest to Dr. Woolsey's search for the cause of the Hawaiian phenomenon, in any event, his observation of the fact as it was presented to his inquiring mind during waking hours, was supplemented by careful experiment upon his own stomach. He noted the effect of the various foods furnished by the hotel menus, and at last it began to dawn upon him that in his own case there was a perceptible expansion whenever he partook of the national food, poi, in any of its seductive forms of preparation. With this clue in hand, or more accurately, in his stomach, Dr. Woolsey soon solved the mystery to his own satisfaction. Poi was the base and the pedestal of the Hawaiian stomach; poi was the alpha and the omega of the strange phenomenon thus noted by the curious traveler; poi was the premiss and the logical conclusion of a scientific thesis on the pathology of this new disease, which, if not checked, will eventually convert the citizens of our Hawaiian territory into a race of rotund folk and barrel-shaped atomies. Pursuing his interesting inquiries still farther Dr. Woolsey found that poi is manufactured from the root of the taro, a vegetable capable of extraordinary fermentative qualities that are apparently unceasing in their operation and are evidently abnormally stimulated by the gastric process of the human stomach. He discovered also that the poi cocktail is the morning and noon tipple of the Hawaiians; that poi drinking is a universal habit; and that among the natives and alien people of the islands poi straight and stringy, one, two and three-fingered, is the chief aliment. He has not yet assigned a reason for this habit, but he thinks it is due to the same cause that induces a craving for caviare and tabasco and garlic and asafetida and similar condiments necessary in the stimulation of a jaded appetite and the temporary regeneration of a perverted palate. Dr. Woolsey has named his discovery "the poi belly," and is now engaged in inventing a scientific term from a dictionary of New Latin, not an easy task when it is understood that the designation to be comprehensive must not only carry the generic name of the plant and the specific name of the product, but that it must also describe some of the intrinsic qualities of the vegetable and their effect on the human system as manifested in the Hawaiians. It may also be required that Dr. Woolsey shall smother his own personality in the broth of scientific nomenclature to the end that future generations of scientists may honor him as the discoverer of a great scientific truth.—Town Talk.

THE WOMAN OF THE HOUR.

Mrs. Will Crocker spent very little of her time making social history in San Francisco, and she was hardly known among the club women who were actively engaged in keeping the earth on its axis; but when 200,000 people were rendered homeless she lost no time in perfecting a plan for feeding the hungry, without subjecting anybody to humiliation. Mrs. Crocker lost her own home and many treasures, but she has not been heard moaning her losses. The benevolent activity of Mrs. Crocker has served to accentuate the unimportance of some of our ostentatious new rich by whom those sickening gush writers and illiterate snob boomers of the daily press are kept in motion.—Town Talk.

HER BUSINESS INSTINCT.

Mrs. Will Crocker is a woman in whom the business instinct is well developed. I hear that it was her husband's practice to carry his own insurance on his Nob Hill residence and all the art treasures therein contained. A few months ago Mrs. Crocker thought it would be a good idea to take out a policy in one of the companies, and she did so without consulting her husband. She secured a policy for two hundred thousand dollars, and since the fire Will Crocker has not had one word to say in criticism of his wife's little business deal.—Town Talk.

TO OUST THE PERENNIALS.

Contra Costa County politicians are getting ready for trouble, and the voters of the county are looking forward to a very lively campaign, for a great effort is to be made to drive the long-intrenched taxeaters of the Court House ring away from the public crib. The political machine that has long controlled the government of the county is controlled by Sheriff Veale and Senator Belshaw, and the incumbent officials who have held office for three consecutive terms are preparing to renominate themselves for a fourth term. Sporadic attempts have been made by individuals to break the ring, but in vain. It seems that nothing short of a charge of dynamite can dislodge the organized band of jobholders. But there is to be organized effort to pull the voracious ones away from the trough by the tails. The politicians that have been fighting the "ins" single banded together the other day and bought the only Democratic journal in the county, "The County Paper," and turned it into a Republican paper. They imported an editor in the person of Dave Williamson, an experienced journalist, who was for years connected with the local press, and he is now engaged in moulding public opinion in favor of a change of administration.—Town Talk.

WHY DOWNEY WORE A SWEATER.

Immediately after the fire many of the erstwhile best groomed citizens of San Francisco presented a negligee appearance. As all the laundries were out of business and hot water was a greater luxury than champagne, clean linen was at a premium. As a consequence, most men looked as though they were out camping, and most men were. One of the exceptions was James D. Phelan, who appeared to have an unlimited supply of clean cuffs and collars. One day a friend commented on the circumstance, and Mrs. Phelan vouchsafed an explanation. "I have been living with Downey Harvey since the fire," he said, "and we wear collars of the same size. I discovered his collars, about three dozen, in a bureau drawer, and I took them out and put them under the bureau. He doesn't know where they are, so he's wearing a sweater."—Town Talk.

THE GALLANTRY OF GRAU.

It has been said that gallantry is dead, but to say so is to confess oneself unacquainted with Enrique Grau, Peruvian Consul. Mr. Grau is nothing if he is not gallant, but he is at least that. The day after the earthquake he was lamenting the loss of all his household goods. "But," said a friend, "the fire didn't reach your quarters until very late in the afternoon. Why didn't you save them? You had ample time." Mr. Grau smiled sadly. "Yes," he said, "I had ample time; but that afternoon I was at Mrs. Eleanor Martin's, and there were several ladies there, and they were in a state of alarm. I knew my property was threatened, but I could not leave those ladies in their distress."—Town Talk.

MACKAY'S BIG DONATION.

There is great amusement in educational circles over the manner in which President Benjamin Ide Wheeler eulched Stanford University out of one hundred thousand dollars. According to one of the first reports of the catastrophe that reached the East, it was California's State University that was demolished by the earthquake. Clarence Mackay immediately wired to President Wheeler that he would donate one hundred thousand dollars to the university, and, according to the story that is being circulated, before the millionaire learned that it was the institution at Palo Alto that had been destroyed, President Wheeler wired his acceptance and thanks.—Town Talk.

"For some time past I have been troubled with dandruff, and with hair falling out of my head continually while my hair appeared lustreless and dead. I tried several remedies without any permanent relief and had about reconciled myself to premature baldness. After using a bottle of your Herpicide, I have been greatly benefited. I am now prescribing it freely to my patients, with full confidence in the result to be obtained. ## NEWSY GOSSIP OF LIVERMORE

LIVERMORE, May 18.—John Beck Jr. was injured last Wednesday while assisting his brother Oscar in the breaking of a pair of broncos. During the performance he was thrown from the wagon and struck the ground so hard as to render him unconscious.
The family physician was called and the injured man, carefully examined, was found that beyond some severe bruises and a bad shaking up, his injuries were not serious.

GO TO DEFEAT.

The local baseball team made a trip to Hayward Sunday for the express purpose of defeating the team of that city in a game upon their own grounds. However, victory perched upon the banner of the other fellows.
The score was 6 to 0, and our boys have no complaint to make. They were well treated by the team and the people of Hayward, and the umpire did his work in a fair and impartial manner, perfectly satisfactory to all.

Manager Walter Thomas has arranged for a return game to be played upon the Livermore grounds on Sunday, July 1, by which time the local boys hope to be able to make it more interesting for their opponents.

OFFICERS CHOSEN.

The Stockmen's Protective Association held its annual election of officers on Sunday afternoon, which time
the following were elected to the various offices:

John McGuchy, president; J. J.
Callaghan, secretary; William Schu-ler, treasurer. The executive committee consists of Patrick Connolly, Michael Mulquens, Hans Christensen,
Peter Moy and Thomas Hawley.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

Peter Vercell, of the French-American Bakery, who recently purchased of J. O. McKown his store building on First street, between K and L, is building an oven in the rear of the same, preparatory to moving into his property as soon as the necessary alterations are complete.

Marshall Black, who occupies this property at present, will move his stock and groceries into the building recently vacated by Scott, the candy man.

SOLDIERS TO RETURN.

Company I is expected to return in a short time. The authorities are planning to abolish the refugee camp in Jefferson Park, which has been under the charge of the local boys and Company D of Napa.

The boys have been away just a month last Thursday, and will no doubt be glad to be at home again. A number of them are at home to remain on account of the expiration of their terms of enlistment. Others have acquired substitutes in order that they may be at home to attend to business matters which they have been forced to neglect, and still others are home on short furloughs and temporary sick leave.

ACCEPT BUILDING.

At its last regular meeting on Monday evening the town board accepted the new fire engine house on First street, and allowed a warrant for $400, which was the balance due the contractor, Thomas Twohey.

The building committee was authorized to move the jail from its present location on Second street to the rear of the new town hall, also, to have the sidewalk extended in front of the fire house and the gutter repaired along the same.

FIRE ALARM.

A violent ringing of the fire bell and blast of whistles at 1 o'clock
Tuesday night aroused the whole town from its slumbers. Many tumbled out of bed and into their clothes and raced up town, only to find that the alarm was occasioned by the burning of a chimney of smokestack on the Southern Pacific roundhouse, where the engine of the Livermore local is housed.

ANSWERS CALL.

Mrs. Peter H. Nissen died on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at her home on the old Wagon place. She has been very ill for the past five or six months with consumption.

She leaves the following family:
Niels Nissen of Livermore, Mrs. Andrew Baye, of Livermore, Mrs. John Black of Pleasanton, and Peter T. Nissen of San Francisco.

WEDDING BELLS.

Two couples of local young people slipped away to Oakland on the early train Wednesday and were married.

William A. Mitchell and Miss Claudine Twisselman were married at St.
Mary's, Oakland, by the Rev. J. P.
Power of Livermore, who had accompanied them for that purpose. Mr.
Mitchell conducts a day line here and is well known and well liked, while his bride has been employed in the store of Ansbacher Bros.

The other couple were A. V. Drown of Rio Vista and Miss Maude Hanna.
The groom is an enterprising young business man in his home city. Miss Hanna has also been employed by the firm of Ansbacher Bros. and has grown to womanhood here, has a host of warm friends and well wishers.

BRIEF NOTES.

Fred Conrad of Oakland, a former Livermore boy, spent Monday here visiting with his brother John.

R. L. Brier of St. Louis is the guest of his sister, Mrs. Frank R. Fassett.
Jack Twisselman is wearing his right hand in a bandage as the result of losing the end of one of his fingers in the sausage machine at Hinz & Murrays' butcher shop last week.

The family of Fred Baker, brother of Rev. Harry Baker, returned to San Francisco Thursday morning after spending a month here following the earthquake, which rendered them homeless.

E. F. Brannan, who has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. George Beck, for several days, left for his home at Eugene, Oregon, on Monday morning.

Madison Beck of Berkeley spent the fore part of the week with his father-in-law, Daniel Luman.

Rev. Harry Baker made a trip to Pleasanton on Wednesday, where he officiated at the marriage of Miss Mabel De Ryder to Frank V. Perry.

Fred Mally, Theodore Gerner, M. P.
Ross, George Beck and M. J. Mueller were elected delegates to the Grand Grove by the local lodge of Druids at their last meeting.

Murphy & McDonald are to make a trip to Danville today to hold an auction sale of the personal property of the late E. S. Pergodo.

Cyriloid fever has been taking a run through the family of Dick Sweet. His

The second of the examinations in the subjects on that day will be spell-

THE WOMAN OF THE HOUR.

Mrs. Will Crocker spent very little of her time making social history in San Francisco, and she was hardly known among the club women who were actively engaged in keeping the earth on its axis; but when 200-000 people were rendered homeless she lost no time in perfecting a plan for feeding the hungry, without subjecting anybody to humiliation. Mrs.
Crocker lost her own home
and many treasures, but she has not been heard bemoan-ing her losses. The benevolent activity of Mrs. Crocker has served to accentuate the unim-portance of some of our osten-tationous new rich by whom those sickening gush writers and illiterate snob boomers of the daily press are kept in motion.—Town Talk.

HER BUSINESS INSTINCT.

Mrs. Will Crocker is a woman in whom the business instinct is well developed. I hear that it was her husband's practice to carry his own insurance on his Nob Hill residence and all the art treasures therein contained. A few months ago Mrs. Crocker thought it would be a good idea to take out a policy in one of the companies, and she did so without consulting her husband. She secured a policy for two hundred thousand dollars, and since the fire Will Crocker has not had one word to say in criticism of his wife's little business deal.—Town Talk.

PABST BREWING COMPANY TO BUILD IN OAKLAND

Announcement Made at Reception Tendered to Vice-President Henning Last Evening.

Another warehouse has been designed and will be located in Oakland, by the Pabst Brewing Company at the same time that a similar structure, by the same firm will be constructed in San Francisco.

Formal announcement to this effect was made under congenial circumstances, at the Pabst Cafe on Eighth street, near Washington, last night, where, around the banquet board were gathered twenty representatives of the business departments of all the newspapers in both this city and San Francisco.

The spread was made as a compliment to the guests by the Pabst Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, which organization was represented by C. W. Henning, the vice-president of the concern. The Pacific Coast interests of this great brewing company, which is known all over the world, were represented by Thomas W. Collins, of the firm of Thomas W. Collins & Sons, the company's general agents for the Pacific Coast with headquarters in San Francisco, while the local interests had, as their representatives, Robert Flemming, the well-known genial and successful manager of the Pabst Cafe in this city.

Accompanying Mr. Henning was A. C. Class, the architect who has designed a number of the magnificent structures in which the Pabst Brewing Company does business in many cities throughout the United States. Mr. Class occupies the responsible position of architect for the company in question. Both he and Vice-President Henning came expressly from Milwaukee in this crisis. Mr. Henning to grasp the situation, to ascertain the extent of the loss of the company and to direct rehabilitation and Mr. Class to receive the necessary mental impression of the situation and to determine as to what kind of structures it would be necessary to design to make the equipment of the Pabst Brewing Company more complete and, at the same time, more extensive than it had ever before been on the Pacific Coast.

Manager Flemming left nothing undone in providing a menu, which was declared gastronomically perfect. The banquet hall was a charm to the eyes by reason of vernal and floral decorative work, which was done under his supervision.

After the menu had been discussed there was expression given to sense and sentiment, fact and fancy, friendliness and fellowship, which delighted every person present. Vice-President Henning proved to be a hospitable host, a worthy, enterprising representative of an enterprising company who could, at the same time, be genial and businesslike. The fire, he said, necessitated new buildings, but the required premises were not to be had in the city. The Pabst Brewing Company had before the recent loss, but fire could not daunt the Pabst Brewing Company and Oakland, because of its appreciation of the loss of the company would have a warehouse at once capacious and convenient. He congratulated Oakland and its people, because he had no doubt that she was all right, because her appreciation of Pabst beer showed that the Pabst Brewing Company would increase in patronage and business here, and he had no other wish than that Oakland would increase in prosperity and population in the same proportion.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK NAMED

WILL BE THE REGULAR DEPOSITORY FOR PUBLIC MONIES.

The following telegram has been received by the First National Bank: "Washington, D. C. May 18, 1906. 'P. E. Bowles, President First National Bank, Oakland, Cal. Designation First National Bank, Oakland, California, hereby changed from temporary to regular depository for public monies. Forward to Treasury United States $100,000 United States bonds as security.'"

"L. M. SHAW, Secretary." John C. Lynch, collector of customs, found that the greatly increased business of this city made such a depository necessary, and it was through his efforts and those of Secretary McCall of the Department of Commerce and Labor, that this designation was made.

This shows more than anything else the headway Oakland is making as a commercial center, for it is only in larger cities that the department consents to establish these depositories. The First National Bank, in addition to the government bonds which it deposits with the United States Treasury at Washington, presents a sound financial condition, as the report of its assets and liabilities show:

Loans and discounts.....$1,972,114.43
United States bonds.....310,000.00

The officers of the bank are: P. E. Bowles, president; L. C. Morehouse, vice-president; L. G. Burpee, cashier; E. N. Walter, assistant cashier. Also the following directors: H. C. Morris, E. A. Heron, W. L. Stone, Wallace E. Eason, E. W. Runyon and W. H. Taylor.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1905 will long be remembered in the home of P. N. Tackett and Alliance, Ky. as a year of blood; which flowed so copiously from Mr. Tackett's lungs that death seemed very near. ## IN A CLASS ALL BY THEMSELVES.

WHATEVER may be said or written for or against so-called patent medicines, there is this to be truthfully said of Dr. Pierce's medicines that applies to very few other medicines put up for sale through druggists: They are entitled to a place all by themselves because they are neither patent nor secret medicines—all their ingredients being openly printed in plain English on their bottle-wrappers. Then again they are entitled to a place all by themselves because they contain not a drop of alcohol in their composition, or make-up.

Send your address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y., with a request for a free booklet, compiled by him from standard medical works and you will learn on reading it that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the strongest schools of practice endorse and recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name, or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung diseases (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College; Prof. Hare, of the University of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, late of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes, that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula on the bottle-wrapper is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming agents and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful ingredient in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

Eminent doctors also praise the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues, "in Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhoea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhoea (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medicinal properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhoea (painful menstruation)." Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Of Black Cohosh, another ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. John King, M. D., author of the AMERICAN DISPENSARY, says:

"In the painful conditions incident to imperfect menstruation, its remedial action is fully displayed. By its special affinity for the female reproductive organs, it is an efficient agent for the restoration of suppressed menses. In dysmenorrhoea (painful periods), it is surpassed by no other drug, being of greatest utility in irritative and congestive conditions of the uterus and appendages, characterized by tensile, dragging pains, resembling the pains of rheumatism. It is a good remedy for the reflex 'side-ache' of women. It should be remembered in rheumatism of the uterus, and in uterine leucorrhoea."

Blue Cohosh root and Yellow Lady's Slipper root, the two remaining ingredients not mentioned above, have just as strong endorsements for their curative merits in diseases peculiar to women, but we have room for no more. "Favorite Prescription" is a happy and harmonious compound of the above mentioned ingredients and faithfully represents them in curative results.

The foregoing are only a few brief extracts taken from amongst the voluminous endorsements which the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have received from the most eminent medical writers of all the different schools of medicine. After reading them who can doubt that Dr. Pierce has selected and compounded his "Prescription" from the most valuable ingredients known to the medical profession for the cure of those chronic diseases of women for which he recommends it? A far more extensive endorsement will be mailed free, in form of a booklet of extracts from standard medical works, to any one sending name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same.

IS DISEASE A CRIME?

NOT so very long ago, a popular magazine published an editorial article in which the writer asserted, in substance, that all disease should be regarded as criminal. Certain it is, that much of the sickness and suffering of mankind is due to the violation of certain of Nature's laws, which if understood and implicitly followed, would result in the prevention of much of the sickness and suffering of humanity. But to say that all sickness should be regarded as criminal, must, on a little sober reflection, appeal to every reasonable and intelligent individual as radically wrong.

Thousands suffer from contagious and infectious diseases most innocently and unconsciously contracted. Other thousands suffer and die of cancerous affections, the cause of which no medical man has yet been wise enough to ferret out and determine, and which can not, therefore, be avoided. Then too, many times stress of circumstances compel people to expose themselves to various disease-producing agencies, such as malaria, bad air in overheated factories, coal mines, and many other situations, and surely those who suffer therefrom should not be branded as criminals.

In so far as disease is contracted or brought on one's self from harmful excesses, over-eating, intemperance and other like indulgences and debauchery, we think, with our editor friend, that it should be regarded as little less than criminal. On the other hand, we think it would be harsh, unsympathetic, cruel, yes criminal to condemn the poor, weak, over-worked housewife who sinks under the heavy load of household cares and burdens which she is obliged to struggle along under until she succumbs to the strain and over-exertion, and suffers from weaknesses, various displacements of pelvic organs and other derangements peculiar to her sex.

The too frequent bearing of children, with its exacting demands upon the system, coupled with the care, worry and labor of rearing a large family, is often the cause of weakness, derangements and debility which the mother has to bear and which are aggravated by the many household cares, and the hard, and never-ending work which she is called upon to perform. Dr. Pierce, the maker of that world-famed remedy for woman's peculiar ills—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—says that one of the greatest obstacles to the cure of this class of maladies is the fact that the poor, overworked housewife can not get the needed rest from her many household cares and labor to enable her to secure from the use of his "Prescription" its full benefits. It is a matter of frequent experience, he says, in his extensive practice in these cases, to meet with those in which his treatment fails by reason of the patient's inability to abstain from hard work long enough to be cured. With those suffering from prolapsus, ante-version and retro-version of the uterus or other displacement of the woman's organs, it is very necessary that, in addition to taking his "Favorite Prescription," they abstain from being very much, or for long periods, on their feet. All heavy lifting or straining of any kind should also be avoided. As much out-door air as possible, with moderate, light exercise is also very important.

It is Dr. Pierce's observation that many housewives suffer much in a weakened condition of their system from too close confinement in-doors. Often the kitchen, where they spend most of their time, is ill ventilated and the bad air and over-heating thereof act most unfavorably upon the woman's strength, until she finds herself suffering from various weaknesses attended by backache, bearing-down pains, or dragging-down sensations that are extremely hard to bear. A catarrhal, pelvic drain, of most debilitating and disagreeable nature, is a common symptom of the congested or inflamed condition of the lining membranes of the pelvic organs, attended, perhaps, with tenderness and pain in these regions.

Now while all the foregoing disagreeable symptoms and sensations will generally yield to the faithful and so-called persistent use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, to realize the very best results from its use, the patient must, as far as possible, abstain from over-work, worry and too close confinement in-doors.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household duties or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, the "Favorite Prescription" has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nerve. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeon's knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be resorted to if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. This "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please, that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, to which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol, and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle-wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines.

An invitation is extended by Dr. Pierce to every sick and ailing woman to consult him by letter. There is absolutely no charge or fee for this. Every letter is carefully considered, fully answered, and its statements held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address as above directed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good."

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

CLOSE SHAVE FOR BEDE.

Congressman Bede of Minnesota still looks back with horror to an experience he had with a Scandinavian audience in his State last campaign. It was up in the pine woods, and the other part of the evening was a stalwart Norwegian, who was to speak in his native tongue. This man failed to arrive, and the committee asked Bede, "Do you speak Norwegian still?"

Bedelinkingly replied in the affirmative through his knowledge only a few phrases. When he faced the audience of about 200 big blue-eyed champions of the Ole and New class he determined to get out of the difficulty as best he could, so he said: "As many of you as cannot understand English, stand up." All were assumed to make such an acknowledgment, and not a man moved. "All right, my friends," said Bede, "as it makes me hoarse to talk Norwegian for any length of time, I'll just address you in English, which you all know and will appreciate as well."—Cleveland Leader.

Don't be too sure you was born to be a leader," said Uncle Eben. A good deed had but look for some rest or comfort, but it had put him into all kinds of trouble.—Washington Star.
